The Other Side.

EDITOR OF JOURNAL: In the issue of the City Press of June 26, 1890, appeared an article headed "No Relief" which impugned the official act of the Overseers of the Poor, and from which, it permitted to go ununsured, the public would infer that the said Overseers grossly neglected their duties. The case is grossly colored by the City Press I will venture to say.

The family in question consists of husband, wife and two children—one 15 years old and the other 12. They have received aid for the past five years and up to June 1, 1890. During the summer months—say, June, July and August—whenever any reduction can be made, particularly where there are no young children, it has been the practice of this Board to make it when no suffering would be caused thereby. As the father of this family appeared to be physically able to labor (for I have seen him so employed), and as the mother was earning, and the eldest boy, 15 years old, could earn something after school closed, it was thought they might be able to get along without any aid from the city for two or three months during warm weather—then have their aid restored. The family was not long ago to entertain one of the inmates of the Almshouse for a week or ten days, therefore the Overseers concluded that they must have had some food to spare (even in their impoverished condition) for the case was provided with full support by the city. Again, for the week ending June 28 the man "sawed up with rheumatism" worked on the highways, and was so employed when the said article was written.

There must have been some motive of the author in going to so much trouble to make an ex parte investigation, when the Overseers of the Poor were in session in their rooms at the time the force was taken place in the City Clerk's office, and all that was necessary to be done was to step across the hallway, about ten feet, and hear what the Overseers had to say about the case. But, they were particularly avoided! Why?

The writer goes on to say that "we publish these parties" and call attention to the matter. "Would it have looked better if he had stepped into the room of the Overseers of the Poor with the ex parte investigation, and then to review the case? They might have changed their verdict and Mr. Moreland thus saved his money. If they had not changed the case, then go ahead with the publication in the City Press."

The Overseers of the Poor never allow any of the poor to suffer. When a case of destitution and suffering is brought to their notice prompt action is invariably taken and that too without giving publicity to their acts.

George T. Smith Sentenced.

George T. Smith of Somerville was yesterday (Wednesday) sentenced to the Superior Court at East Cambridge to three years and a half in the State Prison for burning the vacant dwelling house in Woburn belonging to John R. Carter on the night of Nov. 6, 1888. The grand jury failed to find any evidence connecting Samuel P. Smith with the matter, and he was discharged; as soon as Kendall learned of the arrest of Smith he skipped the country and it is said he is now in Europe. The insurance companies paid the loss on the house to J. R. Carter, who was an innocent victim, although they were not bound to, as he had neglected to notify the companies that the house was vacant. It is learned that Samuel P. Smith has fled since the above events transpired.—Boston Paper.

Comer's Commercial College.

In our business columns will be found the announcement of Comer's Commercial College, 666 Washington St., Boston. The reputation of Comer's College as the leading institution for business education in New England is well known. Woburn Is All Right.

"Why don't the leather makers of Woburn," asks the JOURNAL of that city, "try to get many more of the same trade to settle there and make this city the largest leather manufacturing place in the world? They can do it."

The remarks of this leather city contemporary are pertinent. Woburn has advantages and disadvantages. All of her tanners with two or three exceptions are well located and arranged for a large business. The advantages which Woburn possesses over some other localities are many. Situated within ten miles of the greatest leather city in the world, undoubtedly, the place is enabled to get the product to market at very cheap freight rates and within a very limited time. The tanners and curriers of Woburn can easily watch the market. Spur tracks lead into all the principal tanneries, and the bark is unloaded directly from the car into the bark run, thus saving double or triple handling, which does much towards reducing the cost of leather. Woburn also has the experienced help, which a more remote point or a smaller tanning center might not be able to obtain. The city possesses all the advantages of a great metropolis, with its society, schools, and libraries, and it certainly offers an inducement to tanners to locate there, rather than in the hickory or oak forests away from these advantages. It is not likely there will ever be any trouble in obtaining the best workmen. The two disadvantages which work against the city is the higher cost of bark and hides. But it is stated the advantages getting the bark directly to the vats with little handling in a measure makes up for the eighty per cent advance in cost of bark as compared with many tanneries located in the bark districts. The freight on hides is nearly balanced by the saving of freight of the finished leather. There is no reason why Woburn should lose any of its prestige as a leather producing center for many years to come; but what it needs is more enterprise, push and energy, in meeting the competition which is springing up in other sections of the country. Every legitimate improvement should be furthered, and the business men should never "hide their light under a bushel."—Shoe and Leather Reporter.

To Nervous Debilitated Men.

To the Good People of the Town of Billerica.

Has it ever occurred to you that cheap fuel is more attractive from taxation than from exemption from taxation for a few years?

Has it ever occurred to you that the proposed new Middlesex Canal will place the Town of Billerica in close connection with the coal fields of Pennsylvania and cheap fuel?

Has it ever occurred to you that the Townspeople of Billerica exhibited very inconsiderable civic sagacity in opposing this public improvement?

Twenty-five years ago I knew every man, woman, and child in Peabody. It has been a study with me to mark boys who started in early days of life with myself, to see what has become of them. I was up last fall and began to count them over, and it was an instructive exhibit. Some of them became clerks, merchants, manufacturers, lawyers, doctors. It is remarkable that every one of those that drank is dead; not one from run and no other cause.—Chauncey M. Depue.

The Legislature.

Boston, June 17, 1890.

EDITOR WOBURN JOURNAL: The Massachusetts Legislature will soon adjourn. It is remarkable for many things. It dealt with the gypsy moth, and appropriated thousands of dollars on its account. It saved the scalp of the wood-chuck, and left the little beast to devour the clover in summer, time and to hibernate in the winter. It left the dogs to go unmuzzled, and the sheep to shift for themselves. It measured the length of a salable lobster, and saved his carcass from being broken in two, so that the purchaser may not be cheated with two halves that do not belong together. It left the little baby trout, with his five small inches, to swim till he gets to be six inches long, and then he may be fried, poor thing! It made the feathers fly while it went after the chicken thieves, even venturing into the province of the courts to fix the penalty for the thief who gets away with five dollars' worth of fowl, and for him who steals only one dollar's worth. It settled with the rights of the courts again in trying to settle the punishment of burglars who enter by day, and of those who enter at night. It spent much time upon butter and lard and oil, and it pursued the English sparrow, and tried to find the weight of a dozen of eggs. But the most remarkable action of the Legislature is found in the care it took of the right of men to vote. Hitherto, if a man changed his residence, it involved the possible loss of his right to vote in the election. But, to save to the human male his right to vote every year, the Legislature guarded him by a law, so that no change of residence can affect his right to vote at any election.

Several gentlemen from Lowell and Lawrence and Lynn appealed to the Legislature for protection from a class of gentlemen who have a habit of changing their residence often and of never paying rent. They have the names of a thousand and "dead beats." The gentlemen who had houses to rent got no protection from these frequent movers. But all the same the "dead beat" had his right to move and to vote made safe.

Then came the case of men "guilty of infamous crimes," as a punishment for these crimes, the right to vote should be withheld from the criminal for ten years. But the right of the human male to vote was respected, and even with infamous crimes upon him he can still go unquestioned and deposit his vote.

It was proposed that the men who need "assistance to mark their ballots," previously mentioned, they cannot read, and are not enough to distinguish the party names rendered, should have the assistance of a member of their own party to help them mark their ballots, but this did not pass. Still, however, there was the poll tax which a man must pay before he could vote. But the Legislature decided by a majority vote of both branches that the poll tax of $2 must not stand between the freeman and his right to vote. All this for men.

Now, note the different treatment this remarkable Legislature gave to women. We asked that women may vote who have no need of assistance to mark their ballots, who have not been convicted of crime, and who have been in the country long enough to understand somewhat of its institutions. We did not ask for full suffrage, but only that such women might vote for the men who would levy taxes upon their property and have the spending of their money, and that in the cities and towns where they live they might vote on questions of common interest to man and woman. But the Legislature, tender to suffrage, and to its heart to stone, and the House of Representatives, by a large majority, denied to all women the smallest shred of suffrage. There was indeed "a saving remnant" who stood for equal rights for women. God bless them! But for the others, the historical fact that they were the women of the record and the record will not forget it.

Then women asked that a married mother may have the same legal right to her child as the father has, so that neither parent may dispose of the custody of the child without the consent of the other. But their petition was refused.

Then they asked that when a husband or wife borrows money of the other, the obligation to pay may have the same legal force as when the money is borrowed from a third party. But their petition was refused. Now a husband may borrow the money of his wife and never pay a cent.

They asked that a woman whose husband is dead may have more than the forty days the law now allows a widow to stay in the house without paying rent, while she adjusts herself to her new and hard conditions, with no man to help her. But the petition was refused.

Thus the Legislature has distinguished itself. It remains to be seen whether the same men can be returned another year. Their fortunes, and their sacred honor for the defense of the very principle for the application of which women have sought in vain for many years. The heroes of that day, the men who pledged their lives, their fortunes, and their sacred honor for the defense of the very principle for the application of which women have sought in vain for many years. Then they asked that a woman whose husband is dead may have more than the forty days the law now allows a widow to stay in the house without paying rent, while she adjusts herself to her new and hard conditions, with no man to help her. But the petition was refused.

Thus the Legislature has distinguished itself. It remains to be seen whether the same men can be returned another year. Their fortunes, and their sacred honor for the defense of the very principle had made an investment wholly outside of the usual range of Rutville purchases. She had paid six dollars, for three expensive chickens, for only fifteen eggs. True, she found them that they had been laid by a fine strain of fowls of the Plymouth Rock variety. But what of that? They were nothing but hen's eggs; and not one of the Rutvilles could have paid more than twenty cents for one. Long before the thirteen original straws had formed a glorious Union and nestled beneath the protecting wing of a motherly administrator it was an established rule of that place that thirteen was well named for eggs placed under a sitting hen, and never since that early period had a Rutville hen been insulted with either more or less.

It has already been stated that Mrs. Winters had frequent condoning criticisms from her husband, and that each; giving the happy widow $15 as a result of her trip to the fair.

It is useless to describe the feelings on victory that Mrs. Winters enjoyed on her return to her home in the town. She was astounded. Mrs. Winters' success was the sole topic of conversation for a fortnight, and rapidly with which her fowls grew in popularity was somewhat surprising. The prejudice of her neighbors was broken down in less than three years every flock of fowls in the neighborhood had this new blood. Mrs. Winters commenced her poultry business as an offshoot to the farm operations. At present it is her sole occupation. She has no other but. But few farmers of Rutville are more prosperous than the slender little woman who dared to have a mind of her own and step outside of the rut, even though living in the depths of the Rutville — Nellie Barnes in Springfield Harvest.

FRIDAY, JULY 11, 1890.

The Journal is for sale at the stores of Sprague, Horton, 100 Main Street, Charles R. Brown, 126 Main Street, John Cummings, 58 Commercial Street, E. Wyman, W. A. Hanson, North Woburn, and at G. P. Brown's, Winchester.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

All advertisements, to insure insertion in this paper, must be handed in as early as 10 o'clock on Thursday forenoon.

THE LEGISLATURE.

At the close of a six months session the Massachusetts General Court adjourned for good at half past 11 o'clock, p. m., on July 1. The unusual length of the term ought to teach the people that biennial sessions of the Legislature of this State can't come too soon. Not only are biennial sessions demanded by the best interests of the Commonwealth, but sessions should be limited in duration to 90 days. The appearance of questionable methods, if not actual corruption, among our law-makers is due almost entirely to frequent and long sessions and the economic and constitutional change made the better it will be for the people.

This Legislature was in session 183 days, exceeding in that respect all other Legislatures excepting that of 1883, which was prolonged until July 27, covering 206 days. There have been passed this year 106 acts and 75 resolutions, and but one veto has been received from the Governor.

BOSTON'S POPULATION.

The good people of the "Hub" are growing lustily over the increase which the city has made in population since 1880, and well they may. Chief Wadlin estimates the number of people in Boston at 437,200, and some of the Assessors place it at 400,000 or 500,000 about that.

The gain from 1880 is 75,000, or very close to it. When the fact is taken into account that the suburbs have been growing rapidly, especially in the last five years, at Boston's expense her growth in the last decade is a matter over which her citizens have a right to crow.

Last Wednesday this office received a copy of "The Cambridge Tribune Souvenir" which on examination we found to be something well worth preserving. It is the product of a piece of enterprise on the part of Mr. F. Stanhope Hill, publisher of the Cambridge Tribune, well deserving of imitation and much praise. The "Souvenir" is a 32-page paper, or book, with an artistically designed cover, containing local sketches and other public descriptive, written by several of the most eminent of the literati of the University City, the same being illustrated with more than 100 finely executed pictures, including portraits of distinguished citizens, the new Harvard Bridge, Longfellow's house, scenes at Mount Auburn, churches and other public edifices. The publication is a valuable as well as handsome one and deserves to be carefully preserved for future use.

Last Monday morning the Boston Herald announced the result of the Herald scholarship competition for prizes worth $1000 offered by the enterprising managers of that sterling Boston daily for the best pieces of English composition furnished within a certain time. The contest has excited a keen interest all over New England and the result has been eagerly watched for by innumerable people. The first prize, $500, was won by Miss Sylvia Clark of Pinkerton Academy at Derry, N. H., and the second, $400, was taken by Albert E. Thomas of 174 West Bartlett street in Brockton, Mass. The prize essays were fine pieces of writing, and it is possible that among the mass of manuscripts which the judges had to go over there were many others almost equally meritorious. It was a praiseworthy scheme on the part of the Herald. What next?

The last number of the Stonehead Independent contained a growl at the E. M. X. St. R. Co. headed "The Railroad Rehearsal," based on an item which the editor says was clipped from the JOURNAL. The JOURNAL never published the item or anything resembling it, and if the Independent will exercise a little more care in crediting its clippings it will greatly oblige a people of the JOURNAL, officers all of whom are friends of the East Middlesex road.

The Sunday Critic of Lowell has been bought by Mr. John S. Chandler who will hereafter manage its business. Mr. Henry J. Moulton, who retires from the Editor's chair, has made a successful paper of it ever since it was founded by him in 1877.

If anybody wants some good, bracing weather this hot weather, the 14th of July after-dinner speech of Mayor Johnson will fill the bill.

There was a notable fishing party on Horn Pond last Tuesday, with dinner and cetera and so-forth. The party reported "great luck."

Tuesday night was the hottest night on record. It followed a terrible hot day. There was but little sleep for anybody until well towards morning.

Gage & Co., Merchant Tailors, have made a change in their card this week. It is possible to buy summer suits very cheap at their store just now.

On July 8 Mr. Nichols informed a JOURNAL reporter that he felt greatly encouraged about the ice trade this summer. It was 98 in the shade when he said it.

The concert given by the National Band on the Common last week was a very fine one indeed. A large crowd was in attendance and highly enjoyed the music.

In about four weeks from now the St. Charles C. T. A. Society, or rather the Slattery Dramatic Club, will produce a play for the benefit of G. A. R. Post 33.

A Court Marshall on Private A. L. Heckbert was held at the Armory of Co. G, by Lieut. Col. Frost of Waltham last Tuesday evening. Result not known.

There was never more delicious weather than that of Wednesday afternoon and yesterday. Coming right in the heels of the torrid wave it did ones soul and body good.

Last Sunday evening Rev. Hugh Montgomery gave the names of a large number of men who sell rum illegally in this city. It is likely to result in "making the fur fly."

Mr. Henry B. Wood and family have gone to Cape Porpoise, off New Brunswick, Me., for vacation, rest and recreation. They could not have selected a better place.

Warren N. Blake had fine luck on the Shawshenken river last week, having caught sixty pounds of fish in variety. Some of the pickered tipped the scales at 3 3/4 pounds.

People in pursuit of new harnesses or want to get old ones repaired in the best shape will meet with no difficulty in finding Mr. A. V. Haynes' establishment on Montvale Avenue.

It was quite clearly demonstrated that between 5000 and 6000 Woburn people attended the Winchester 4th of July celebration, three-quarters of whom went and came by street cars.

The officers of Shawshenken Tribe, I. O. R. M., and Nahmokee Council, D. of P., will be installed by Deputies Ferrin and Lillian Burnham next Monday evening, the 14th instant, in Red Mens Hall.

Yesterday morning's Globe recorded two votes for Dr. Frank W. Graves of this city for the Globe's $1000 sword which is presented to the War Veteran who has the largest number of votes.

Rev. W. Scott Ward, who is announced to preach at M. E. Church in this city next Sunday, is a Woburn boy, and a smart one at that. Probably many of his former townspeople will go to hear him.

Travelers will do well to cast an eye over the last page of this issue of the JOURNAL and let it rest on the new Boston & Maine time-table and critically observe the changes recently made therein. They will find in the exercise both knowledge and consolation.

Thomas Feeney, one of the smartest of the Boston Record's corps of bright reporters, is going to Newburyport for his vacation. He is one of the most popular young newspaper men in Boston.

Dr. Harlow and wife had a fine trip to the West. They will return shortly to their homes in this city. The Doctor doubtless was surprised at the changes found at Chicago, St. Paul and elsewhere out there.

If those who want to vote for "the most popular" G. A. R. man will leave the ballots which they cast for the Boston Globe with Barker White he will send them up and forward them to the Globe office free of charge.

If the local Globe man succeeds in getting the Woburn City Government to build those long-talked-of seats around the Common we shall be in favor of raising a monument to his memory. It beats all how slow they are about it!

Yesterday morning the Congregational and Baptist Sunday Schools of this city united in a picnic at Hag-stead's home in Dover. There was a big party of them and filled quite a number of cars. It was a delightful day for a picnic.

Mr. Edward L. Shea left here last Saturday afternoon for the home of his parents at Ellsworth, Maine. He went to Bar Harbor by steamer and thence by railroad to the place of his destination. He expected to be away a fortnight or so.

The article published in the JOURNAL last week under the head, "Woburn's All Right," should have been credited to The Shoe and Leather Review instead of The Shoe and Leather Reporter. It was a good article on Woburn's principal manufacturing industry and deserved to have its source properly acknowledged.

The JOURNAL Book and Job office is complete in all its appointments and has the reputation of turning out fine work and as much of it as any printing establishment in Middlesex county. It is fully supplied with presses, all the latest styles of type, stock and men to use them, and gentlemen, your work is respectfully solicited.

The Salvation Army show signs of a good deal of life and activity these summer evenings. The day of public scoffing at them is past and gone and nobody now dreams of disturbing their processions, music or street devotions.

The children's temperance society, "Loyal Legion," will hold a picnic, weather permitting, at Baldwin's Grove, No. Woburn, on Thursday, July 17. Horse cars leave the Centre at 8.55. All invited to attend.

A branch of the Friendly Aid Society was organized here last Wednesday evening in Concert Hall. There were forty-one charter members. The following named officers were chosen: Past President, Charles E. Trapp; President, Charles M. Strout; Vice President, Edward E. Foss; Secretary, William J. Brown; Treasurer, William J. Brown; Clerk, Hiram Whitford; Marshal, Edward Caldwell; Warden, John O'Donnell; Sentinel, Charles W. Dorr.

The Winchester Star (always enterprising) just besides its regular edition printed on the 3d, it got out a 4th of July edition on Saturday which contained a full and complete account of the great celebration and other matters of interest. When he lays himself out in it Editor Wilson is a "rusher from Rushville." And, by the way, his amiable spouse, sister W., isn't any of your slow coaches with reporter's pencil or composing stick. The people of Winchester owe the publisher of the Star something.

The Woburn Brass Band will give four concerts on the Common in this city during the season, the first to be given on Wednesday evening, July 23. This series, coupled with that of the National Band on alternate nights, will afford the citizens of Woburn and vicinity fine course of open-air concerts as can be seen up in the vicinity of Boston.

Mr. Elmer F. Blank, who is Dr. Dodge's successor in the drug business, comes with high recommendations as to moral character, business energy, financial ability, and thorough practical knowledge of pharmacy, holding certificates of registration as a pharmacist in both New York and Massachusetts. He doubt not he will fully maintain the high reputation of the old stand for reliability.

The following are the new officers of the Congregational and Baptist Union, No. 421 of this city: President, George M. Loring; Vice President, William Stewart; Treasurer, Stephen J. Beazant; Financial Secretary, Amos Langill; Conductor, Timothy Ring; Warden, Donald Robertson; Preceptor, Donald W. Stewart.

Mr. Amos Cummings has knocked the bottom out of prices of millinery goods at a great rate. He has "crattled" the market and kept things humming. Buying for cash down he has been able to get goods at hardpan figures, and marking them at the meagre advance on cost he has just naturally slaughtered prices and raked in heaps of "wealth." Mr. Cummings is a lively trader.

People interested in insurance should read a card in this paper signed by Mr. Thomas S. Spurr of Woburn. Mr. Spurr, whose business is transferred, is one of the best known real estate and insurance agents in Boston. He resides in Winchester and also has an office there, at which a large share of the insurance and real estate transactions of the town and neighborhood are done.

Rev. Earnest C. Richardson, Librarian of Hartford Theological Seminary, has been chosen to succeed the late Dr. Frederic Tilton as the head of the Library at Princeton University. Mr. Richardson is a graduate of Amherst College and Hartford Seminary. He will enter upon his duties at Princeton at the opening of the college year this fall. He is a son of Mr. James C. Richardson of this city.

Mr. William E. Jenks has a business card on the first page of this paper to which particular attention is called. Mr. Jenks needs no introduction. He is a native of Woburn and vicinity for he is well and favorably known here as a bright and successful business man and one in whom clients can safely put their trust. He deals in "gilt edge" securities only, and his judgment as to investments is entirely reliable.

If Taber, the prince of fish dealers, hadn't given the JOURNAL folks a fine large cut from one of the handsomest Penelope salmon that ever struck Woburn they might have run uncomfortably short for a 4th of July dinner. But he came gallantly and seasonably to their rescue and nothing could have been lovelier. People who are fond of the best fish that swim should always go to Taber's market for their fish dinner.

The corner-stone of the new Methodist Church is to be laid at 2 o'clock next Monday afternoon, July 16. The clergy of the city have accepted invitations to attend and it is expected that brief addresses will be made by Rev. Daniel March, D. D., pastor of the First Congregational Church of Woburn, and Bishops Foster and Mallahan on the occasion. The ceremonies will be interesting and will, no doubt, attract a large crowd of witnesses.

Mrs. McDermott, wife of Police Officer Charles F. McDermott, died at her home on Scott street early last Wednesday morning of consumption. She left a husband, two small children, a brother, several sisters and numerous other relatives and friends to mourn her early death—for she was a young woman and not many years married. Mrs. McDermott was the daughter of Mr. Michael Murphy, and a lady highly esteemed by all who knew her.

Col. Edward Simonds has a record. He has served as policeman in this place every night before the 4th of July for just 40 years without a single break. His watch was always been from midnight on the 3-4 to 12 noon the next day, and he has never been prevented by illness or other cause from performing this service every Independence Day without exception for the last 40 years. We do not think there is another man in Massachusetts who can show such a record.

Mr. Joseph P. Shields decides on the JOURNAL as the vehicle through which to acquaint the public with the fact that he has opened a drugstore on Main street opposite the postoffice where the prescription and a general business will be carefully and promptly attended to. He has had a thorough schooling in the profession and understands the whole of it completely. He has a nice store, good stock, and will no doubt make a success of it.

The National Band will give a concert on the Common Wednesday evening, July 16, 1890, with the following PROGRAMME:

1. March, Capt. Folson.
2. Overture, Post and Peasant.
3. Polka, J. E. and T. H. Martin.
4. Medley, "The First Love."
5. Waltz, "Trinity College."
6. Song, "The First Love."
7. Spanish Dance, A. F. in Madrid.
8. Song, "The First Love."
9. Gavotte, "First Love."
10. Galop, "Opheus."

A branch of the Friendly Aid Society was organized here last Wednesday evening in Concert Hall. There were forty-one charter members. The following named officers were chosen: Past President, Charles E. Trapp; President, Charles M. Strout; Vice President, Edward E. Foss; Secretary, William J. Brown; Treasurer, William J. Brown; Clerk, Hiram Whitford; Marshal, Edward Caldwell; Warden, John O'Donnell; Sentinel, Charles W. Dorr.

The Winchester Star (always enterprising) just besides its regular edition printed on the 3d, it got out a 4th of July edition on Saturday which contained a full and complete account of the great celebration and other matters of interest. When he lays himself out in it Editor Wilson is a "rusher from Rushville." And, by the way, his amiable spouse, sister W., isn't any of your slow coaches with reporter's pencil or composing stick. The people of Winchester owe the publisher of the Star something.

The Woburn Brass Band will give four concerts on the Common in this city during the season, the first to be given on Wednesday evening, July 23. This series, coupled with that of the National Band on alternate nights, will afford the citizens of Woburn and vicinity fine course of open-air concerts as can be seen up in the vicinity of Boston.

Mr. Elmer F. Blank, who is Dr. Dodge's successor in the drug business, comes with high recommendations as to moral character, business energy, financial ability, and thorough practical knowledge of pharmacy, holding certificates of registration as a pharmacist in both New York and Massachusetts. He doubt not he will fully maintain the high reputation of the old stand for reliability.

INSIDE OF FIVE MINUTES.
"Bother that speech! I wish to goodness the Fourth of July was over!" Mr. Jeffrey groaned as if all the sins of Chicago were loaded on his conscience. Presently he remarked, in a calm voice, to his pretty, young wife, behind the teakettle:—
"Mrs. Jeffrey, those biscuits are a success." And when Mr. Jeffrey had said so the last half of the seventh hot biscuit, with its thick coat of butter, reached the place where the groan had come from. But while stirring his fifth cup of tea he said, with another groan: "That speech makes me lose my appetite. You don't know how a fellow can be worried about his maiden speech, Molly! You need not fret about such things. That's a comfort, anyway."
"You need not worry either, Jeff. Ask to be excused, if it bothers you. They will invite somebody else to take your place."
"Won't do, Molly! I was rather pleased when the committee asked me, and so I promised right away. It would look bad to back out now."
"Look here Will! suppose I write that speech for you, and you deliver it?"
"Oh, Moll, I would not think of such a thing!"
"Why not? Why can't we help each other in this as in everything else? The one of us finds a thing easier ought to do it."
"It's a great deal harder than you think."
"I remember the time when I was Molly Ross. I thought it a great deal easier then to dash off an oration than to bake a decent loaf of bread. Well, shall I write it for you?"
"No, thank you, Molly! It would trustees, and disappeared from this world at the end of the month. At that period she was last seen entering a village church, where a simple marriage ceremony changed her into Mrs. Jeffrey, the wife of a young, strong, cheerful, and successful man. Miss Molly Ross had worked five hours a day, and rested on Saturdays, Sundays, legal holidays and all summer; Mrs. Jeffrey worked sixteen hours a day, and knew no Saturday holidays, no Sunday rest, no summer vacation. Miss Molly Ross had cashed forty dollars a month; Mrs. Jeffrey cashed just forty dollars less. Still Mrs. Jeffrey was supremely happy, even after a year of married life, and could not understand how in the world she could have gotten along as Molly Ross. What a difference love makes anyway! The young couple were doing well, but they had to work very hard. He toiled in the fields and stable from sunrise till sunset, certain parts of the year; she worked in the kitchen and dairy all day long, all the year round, and had breath enough left to sing merrily at her work. And she had the loveliest color in her cheeks, not due to cosmetics, but manufactured by the old reliable firm, Youth, Health and Kitchen Fire.

It was a baking time on the farm—a busy, warm time. The Fourth of July, the village celebration, and Mr. Jeffrey's maiden speech was drawing close. Dinner was over, dish washing, too—and Mrs. Molly now proceeded to churn butter. A boggy stopped at the gate; an elderly gentleman, with gray whiskers and gold spectacles, came walking up to the house, and shook Mrs. Jeffrey's outstretched hand on the doorstep, where the little lady in her neat print dress and white apron, had come to meet her unexpected visitor, one of her former school trustees.

"I am so glad to see you, Judge Burns!" said her lips with a smile, and she meant it. "How are you and your people? Take this rocking chair." "I am sorry I cannot stay, Mrs. Jeffrey; I am on my way to Pine Lake on business. Very warm day—the dust nearly choked me—so I thought I would come and ask you for a drink out of your well, if you will allow me Mrs. Jeffrey."

They were both standing by "the old wooden bucket" at the well, where the judge had enjoyed a cool drink. "I am sorry Mr. Jeffrey missed your visit," said Mrs. Jeffrey. "I know he would be delighted to have a talk with you. Could you not come in to tea on your way home from Pine Lake? Mr. Jeffrey will be in there. We shall be happy to have you—and there will be fresh butter milk for you. I remember you were fond of it."

"I saw Mr. Jeffrey in the fields a little way off," the judge remarked with a smile. "Do believe he was talking to the haystacks. I am nearly sure I caught some scraps of an oration. He stood there, pickfork in hand, before a row of stacks, and harangued them: 'Ladies and gentlemen! On this memorable day, I knew he was practising his Fourth of July, for I am in the same box. For Mr. Jeffrey it has at least the charm of novelty; but wait until he has served the same dish some fifteen or twenty years; he will be pretty tired of patriotic speeches by that time.' He smiled and she smiled."

"He complains now already. I offered to write that little speech for him, but he declined."
"Declined! Did he really? Well, well. Look here, Mrs. Jeffrey, let somebody else have it. Ask me for instance."
"Oh, Mr. Burns! you are joking."
"Not at all, not at all, my dear madam! I never was more in earnest. Do let me have that speech, please! I am willing to stop down to pick up the crumbs that fall from the rich man's board—in this case. But remember it must be short—five minutes and no more."

"Would it not be a capital joke on Mr. Jeffrey?" the lady said, half musingly. "Well, judge, I don't care if I write it for the fun of the thing. You must not tell him, though before the Fourth of July is over. After the celebration you may tell him whenever you like."

"I can keep my peace if you can, Mrs. Jeffrey. Will you write it while I go to Pine Lake? I might stop here on my return in a couple of hours and get the manuscript."
"Business goes before pleasure, you know. I have my butter to churn."
"Look here; suppose you let me churn your butter while you write the speech?"
The old gentleman was by this time fairly interested in this novel transaction. He went to tie the horse and buggy under a shade tree, while thinking by himself:—
"There is plenty of time, and it will be cooler to drive in an hour or so. Churning is easy enough, I am sure; it's women's work. It won't take me long. It will be quite a change, too—variety delectat. It will be interesting to see what kind of opus that smart little lady turns out."

Mr. Jeffrey practised oratory before an audience of haystacks in the sweat of his honest brow. Puck, the judge's horse, made frantic efforts to keep off the flies. Mrs. Molly sat in the parlor where her marriage certificate and teacher's diploma looked down upon her out of her frames. Her pen was busily rasping over the note paper, and the writer looked pretty, cool and happy. Judge Burns looked neither cool nor happy in the cellar, sitting on a stool before an old-fashioned churn. The old gentleman was fast losing his temper, and making but slow progress with the butter. He did not find it as easy as he had thought—no woman's work by any means. He felt like

This once the Guide seemed the centre of attraction to both Mr. and Mrs. J. "Let's see about the celebration," she said eagerly; "do read aloud Will!"
"Haven't time. It would take me all the afternoon. Here are columns and columns but not about me. Oh, yes, sure enough. They are in hopes Mr. Jeffrey's corn crop will turn out a greater success than his oration." Well, I don't care what they say. I've laughed good naturedly, for he had got over his mortification. "Here is Judge Burns' speech, nearly all of it seems, and half a column of eulogy on it. Just listen what they say." "A perfect swell of poetic expression—a chaste pearl of oratory—dewy freshness—a lightning flash of patriotic eloquence." Are you choking, Molly?" She was as red as a berry, coughed and laughed alternately. "Well, I must say it was a first rate speech, but no more than might be expected of a lawyer who has the gift of gab. He is an old hand at that sort of thing. Why, he has spoken in public these last thirty years. It's his business to talk, just as it is mine to raise corn and wheat. How did you like his speech, Molly?" "I can't say I thought it so very wonderful," she said. "It was nice enough and short. He was through before his time was up. I noticed that more than anything else."

"You don't mean to say so? Why I thought of you while he spoke—how you would appreciate him. They were all well about that speech, both men and women. It was full of fun and fire and enthusiasm. Choking again, Molly? Shall I slap your back?" She shook her head. "Yes, he understands his business, that's certain. What's that? Looks very much like Burns' handwriting. What can he have to write about?"

Mrs. Molly dashed to the roots of her hair, while Mr. Jeffrey cut the envelope with a table knife, and fell in a brown study over his letter. His wife watched him with a quizzical twinkle in her eyes. He looked as if he were reading the will of a maiden aunt whose inheritance he had been sure of and who had died suddenly after changing her will in favor of the Hottentot mission.

The letter really was from Judge Burns and ran as follows:—
"My Dear Mr. Jeffrey: Excuse an old friend who gladly took what you had declined. The oration I delivered yesterday, literally after the manuscript was the work of Mrs. Jeffrey. While she wrote that very excellent speech, which I accepted as a Godsend, I took her place at the churn, and spent one of the most laborious hours of my life making butter. The transaction being altogether in my favor, I feel very much indebted to Mrs. Jeffrey, and hope she will accept a token of my sincere regard in the shape of a new petting churn, which, as the manufacturers claim, will make churning a mere child's play. My dear Mr. Jeffrey, your partner in marriage has more brains, heart and energy than you and I taken together."
Sincerely your friend,
HEZEKIAH E. BURNS.

"Molly, did you really write that speech?"
"Yes sir," said Mrs. Molly. "And it came off inside of five minutes sir. Your coffee is cold. Let me give you another cup—Willie dear."—Harper's Bazar.

THE PATHFINDER DEAD.

Last Sunday, July 13, General John C. Fremont died at his home in New York City after a short sickness aged 77 years. One son and a few other members of his family were present and saw him die, his wife and a daughter being in California, and another son, an officer in the U. S. Army, being at his post in some Western State or Territory.

General Fremont gained his title of Pathfinder for daring deeds and heroic achievements in the Rocky Mountains many years ago, and for being the first of white men to make explorations in the Western wilds and opening them up for settlement by pioneers from the East. As far back as 1843 General Fremont with a handful of brave and hardy men explored the region of Salt Lake and published the first account of it that the world ever heard of. Later his perilsous passages through the Rocky Mountains and opening up of routes of travel through them were achievements the records of which will not very soon fade out of the pages of history.

General Fremont saved California to the United States when the Mexican war was on in 1847, for which he was duly honored. He was the first Republican candidate for President in 1856, but was defeated by Buchanan. He did noble service in the War of the Rebellion for which he never received from the Government the reward he deserved.

The life of General Fremont was an eventful one, and his name will occupy fair pages in this country's history after that of many others about whom a great deal more noise was made by him having entirely faded out of the memory of the Nation.

THE ORIGINAL PACKAGE BILL.

Amid the pressure of other matters, the House should not neglect to assign an early day for the consideration of the "Original Package Bill." That is a subject which does not admit of delay, and with reference to which there is a growing impatience in the public mind.

The decision of the Supreme Court has caused a great change to come over Topeka. The town is now full of "Original Package" houses; the old saloon-keepers that had squatted just beyond the State line, are all back with their packages, large and small, and are exulting over their victory. What a shame it is that Congress do not do something to relieve the people from such disgraceful proceedings! It is too bad that people who try to be decent have to submit to such things.

There is no measure now before Congress that calls for prompt action more imperatively than the one above mentioned. It is of vastly more importance to the nation at large than the Silver, Tariff or Federal Election bill, and ought to be the first thing attended to that the gates may be shut down before the whole country is flooded with rum in "original packages."

THE FEDERAL ELECTION BILL.

On Monday last the Republican members of the U. S. Senate voted in caucus to pass Mr. Lodge's Federal Election bill which means that it will soon become law.

Congress has inaugurated no measure for a long time that has met with such frenzied opposition from the Democratic side of the House as this. It seems to think that it is an uncommonly heavy burden aimed directly at their most vital parts. It looks a little that way certain, and it is not surprising that they howl.

With Mr. Lodge's Election law in full and unobstructed operation in all the States south of Mason and Dixon's line the "solid South" would never more be heard of and Republicans would get some votes and a fair share of the Presidential Electors and Congressmen from that region.

No honest people will object to the Federal Election bill which the House has passed and the Senate has agreed to. The Democrats are the only ones who object to it because "no rogue e're felt the blunder draw with good opinion of the law."

The Democracy, especially the Southern Democracy, are bitter against Congressman Lodge and his bill, but the latter is sure to go through all right, and the former don't care a sou whether the Democracy love him or not.

THE NATIONAL ENCAMPMENT.

The National Encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic, which is to be held in Boston during the second week in August, promises to be the largest one that ever met. Information from all parts of the Union makes it certain that it is to be an immense affair, for which the people of Boston have already begun preparations on a large scale.

The Veterans everywhere are anticipating the occasion with great interest. It will collect together many distinguished military men as well as thousands of the rank and file. They will receive a cordial welcome and the very best of treatment from the citizens of Boston and soldiery of the State.

THE SILVER BILL.

Late last week the Silver Bill, over which Congress labored for some time in order to perfect, was passed and sent to the President for his approval. It is claimed to be a compromise between the free coinage people and the radicals of the other wing and will on the whole prove to be a very harmless measure. What its effect will be on business can only be told after it has been tried. There are all manner of theories about it—in fact, the operation of the law is only a matter of theory at the best. Its actual influence on money, either gold or silver, no man can tell, although everybody who cares enough about it to give it any thought has a theory as to how it is going to work.

But it is likely the bill will prove of more benefit to the country than a good many people think for.

A copy of "Visitation in America" by Frances Power Cobbe and Benjamin Ryan, with a Preface (the best part of the pamphlet) by Philip G. Peabody, a lawyer of eminence in Boston, and a staunch friend of the Mass. S. P. C. A., has found its way to this office and will receive proper attention in due time. The publication contains also papers from Col. R. G. (Bob) Ingersoll, Rev. Phillips Brooks, Senator Dawes, and other distinguished people, all in remembrance of the cruel and idiotic practice of vivisection of dumb animals. It, with the abundance of good reading issued by Mr. George T. Angell the devoted and efficient President of the above Society, ought to be sown broadcast all over the land.

We feel justified in advising a careful perusal of "Library Notes" in this paper because the writer of them possesses good literary judgment and taste and hence her recommendations as to what books deserve first to be read are sure to follow than those who are of inferior culture and literary gifts.

The National Band gave one of the finest concerts on the public bandstand last Wednesday evening that has ever been given there. The selections were nearly all new and there was not a poor one among them. The "Medley," or string of old plantation and other airs, was the best we ever heard.

A Wood Mantel which costs $30 often adds $100 to the beauty and value of a house. At one establishment in Boston over sixty styles of mantels are erected and on permanent exhibition. No one should fail to see this Mantel Exhibition which is at Paine's Furniture Warehouse, 48 Canal street, Boston.

Auctioneer Gregory advertises an important sale of real estate in the JOURNAL to day to which attention is called. There is a chance there for somebody to "make a dollar" by attending the sale, for the property is sold to the highest bidder, and the money may. Gregory is pretty busy these days.

Among the courtesies tendered the New England delegations to the annual meeting of the National Pedagogic Association at St. Paul, Minn., were two first-class cyclones, one of which, above Minneapolis, destroyed 55 lives, and the other, on Lake Pepin, 100 lives. Perhaps our people did not relish such a demonstrative reception.

The JOURNAL Book and Job office is complete in all its appointments and has the reputation of turning out as good work and as much of it as any printing establishment in Middlesex county. It is fully supplied with presses, all the latest styles of type, stock and men to use them, and gentlemen, your work is respectfully solicited.—J.

The members of Post 33 and Relief Corps 84 went to Chelsea last Saturday evening and spent a few hours at the Soldiers Home there. They filled three street cars and Supp. wentworth made everything as comfortable and pleasant as could be for them. They enjoyed the visit at the Home and the ride to this city which they reached about midnight.

Last Tuesday Dennis Hurley, who lives near Sherman Place, was overcome by the heat so severely that his condition necessitated the attendance of waterers all night. He was better Wednesday morning and went to work, but about noon attempted to cross a street, and fell, fracturing his spine, but did not stay down long. He looks bad but is improving very rapidly.

Driver Thomas C. Boyce of Fire Engine No. 1, who was injured by the premature discharge of a cannon while firing the sunset salute on July 4, and so wonderfully escaped great mutilation and perhaps death, made his first appearance on the street last Tuesday. He came down to Bowdoin street for a shave, but did not stay down long. He looks bad but is improving very rapidly.

Tuesday evening, July 15, D. D. G. N. W. Snow and suit installed the Officers of Ramford Lodge, G. R. K. of H. : P. D., George Parker; D. C. W. Nute; Asst. D. Alex. Grant; R. O. M. Brooks; Fin. R. A. H. Holland; Treas. A. S. Wood; Chap. F. W. Bosworth; Guide, Joseph Barker; R. A. S. Wood; Alternate, A. H. Holland; Trustees, F. A. Flint, O. M. Brooks, F. W. Bosworth.

The mid-summer convention of the Middlesex Central Christian Endeavor Union and picnic will be held at Highland Lake Grove, Norfolk, next Saturday, July 26, for which great preparations are in progress in the way of speakers, music, games, boating, etc. A special train of cars will leave the N. Y. & N. E. Railroad station at the foot of Summer street, Boston, at 9 A. M. sharp. Tickets for the round trip from Boston 50 cents.

Mr. Jacob M. Ellis has a good many large jobs on hand, and employs a good many men. He has a contract at White River Junction, Vt., that takes a large force; the demolishing of the old and building of a new railroad bridge at Somerville is a big job; he has contracts for concreting at Andover; the foundation of the Woburn M. E. Church and the foundation of many other buildings keep him, his men, and his horses very busy all the time.

"The Fall of Babylon" now running at Oakland Garden, Boston, is a big thing. Thousands of people go to see and are delighted with it every day. It would take a good deal more room than we have to spare to describe it, so the reader must accept our word for it that it is a magnificent show, spectacular play, whatever else it may be named. It is richly worth going over to Oakland Garden and the price of admission to see.

Mr. E. Prior will hereafter carry on the auctioneer business on his own hook, to which end the partnership of William Winn & Co. has been dissolved. Mr. Prior has cried sales in this place and vicinity for quite a number of years and is regarded as one of the best public auctioneers anywhere in this part of Middlesex. He has made friends and is popular with everybody on account of his fairness and reliability, on which score he has always been in demand to cry at vendues. He will doubtless continue to do a good business. And success to him, says the JOURNAL.

Miss Jennie E. Skinner of the Plympton School and Miss Amanda Stevens of the Ramford (N. W.) will start next Monday on a trip to the White Mountains where they expect to make quite a tarry. During their stay in that wild and romantic region these ladies will spend a night at the Summit House on Mt. Washington. At the close of their visit up there they intend to come down to Warren, N. H., where they will be met by Miss Emma Fowler, and the three will spend several weeks for rest and recreation. If anybody needs a vacation good, faithful school teachers do.

The Editor of the JOURNAL owes Mr. John Jones of this city a vote of thanks. When he returned from a very pleasant visit to his old home at Carriacmacross, County Monaghan, Ireland, some 10 days ago, Mr. Jones brought with him a fine blackthorn cane which he offered expressly for the purpose, and which will be prized as a handsome and valuable present by the recipient as long as he has any use for a cane. It is a fine stick, and will be valued all the more highly from having come straight across the waters from the "Old Sol." Mr. Jones will please accept our thanks.

The following officers of Crystal Fount Lodge, I. O. O. F., were duly installed by H. W. Potts and suite of Putnam Lodge of Roxbury last Monday evening: N. G., Philip S. Goodrich; V. G., William D. Wright; R. S., Alonzo L. Perham; T. Orlando M. Brooks; C. Benjamin L. Trail; W. Ainsley E. Douglas; I. G., William J. Brown; O. G., James C. Hill; R. S. N. G., Thomas L. Loomer; L. S. N. G., George B. Woodside; R. S. V. G., Edwin F. Tibbitts; L. S. V. G., Elmer R. Soper; Chaplain, Robert S. Dickinson; Organist, T. M. Chute. At the close of the ceremony a collation was served.

Union 21 of the Union Endowment, a Five Year Benefit Order, was instituted in G. A. R. Hall, Main street, on Monday evening July 7, by Dr. J. Anson Pashley, Supreme Supervisor, and W. James. The following is a list of officers: President, Dr. Robert Chalmers; Vice Pres., W. A. Poole; P. Pres., Asa G. Sheldon; Clerk, S. Woodside; Treasurer, Geo. H. Sutherland; Financial, Abbie M. Chase; Chaplain, Catherine Rogers; Marshall, Silas F. Corbett; I. Door-keeper, Eva Davenport; O. Door-keeper, Ida Smith. The next meeting will be held in G. A. R. Hall Monday evening, July 21. All wishing to become Charter members can do so by applying to Dr. Chalmers on or before that date.

Cards announcing the wedding of Miss Mary Reade, daughter of postmaster Lawrence Reade of this city, and Doctor Charles H. Winn of Winchester, and for the wedding reception, have been sent out this week. The ceremonies will be held at St. Charles (R. C.) church in this city on Tuesday evening, July 23, and will be officiated by Rev. F. E. Quesely, assisted by other clergymen. The wedding reception will be held in Music Hall, Post-office Building, from 8 to 9 o'clock on the same evening and rumor says it is going to be on a magnificent scale. The same authority places the number of invitations at 500. Music Hall, rumor goes on to say, will present a brilliant scene on that evening, and that Miss Mary's bridal reception will eclipse anything of the kind ever witnessed in this city.

Dr. J. M. Harlow and Mrs. Harlow returned last Tuesday evening from their Western trip and visit in good health and spirits, and well pleased with all they saw and experienced while away. After leaving Chicago, where they made a considerable stop, they were chiefly devoted to sight-seeing. The Doctor and wife visited St. Paul (with the beauties of which city they were delighted) and regions thereabout, and then proceeded on to the enterprising, wealthy and rapidly growing New England city of Sioux Falls, South Dakota, where they remained several days, and of the beauties of which city they were delighted. They gave a glowing account. There is nothing "mushroom" about Sioux Falls. It is based on solid New England money and enterprise; it has the elements of great wealth within its own borders; its waterpower, its mills, its vast quarries of Jasper, etc., are bound to be the building up of a great and prosperous city there. It grows, though, although phenomenal in extent, healthy, and such it is bound to be in the future. Dr. Harlow has money invested in live industries at Sioux Falls, and if he were only a wealthy man he would put more of it into other enterprises out there. The Doctor and Mrs. Harlow enjoyed their Western trip very much indeed.

A representative of the JOURNAL attended the installation of the officers of Shawshoehn Tribe, I. O. R. M., at Nahamokee Council of D. of P. last Monday evening in Red Men's Hall, and enjoyed it very much. After the installation a fine treat of cake, ice cream, etc., was provided at G. A. R. Hall which was partaken of by members of the Order and invited guests with pleasure. The following were present: Shawshoehn Tribe, I. O. R. M., and Senior Sagamore, A. T. Webber; Junior Sagamore, John Bates; Sanaps, A. L. Perham, D. K. Colgate; Warriors, C. W. Ames, J. E. Boutwell, Wm. Grant, W. R. Newcomb; Braves, Frank Newcomb, Joseph LaRue, J. M. Vetter, J. E. Givens; Guards, P. M. Wardlaw, W. J. Bryant. In Nahamokee Council: Prophetess, Mrs. Jennie F. Butters; Posauntess, Mrs. S. Jessie Crowell; Wonnahs, Mrs. Harriet Knights; Powahatun, J. Hart; K. of R. Olivia Greenleaf; Assistant K. of R. Mrs. Ella G. Richardson; K. of W. Mrs. Mabel Dickinson; Seers, Mrs. Emma F. Webber, Mrs. E. Bryant; Warriors, Mrs. P. M. Wardlaw, Mrs. Sarah E. Duren; Councillors, Austin Crowell, L. W. Brittan; Warriors, Misses Ida Smith, Hattie Whittle, Nellie Smith, Margaret Hall; Braves, A. T. Webber, A. U. Dickson, Wm. Grant, D. K. Colgate; Guards, Mrs. Abbie French, W. J. Bryant.

Officer Clarence Kean spotted his man about 2 o'clock last Monday morning and because Henry F. LaRock could not furnish $1500 bail for his appearance in court on a criminal trial of the Superior Court at Cambridge (providing the grand jury find a bill against him), which was Judge Conner's conclusion after investigating LaRock's case in the Woburn District Court last Monday morning, he is confined behind iron bars in the County Jail.

LaRock, a former Officer Clarence Kean found his man LaRock was arrested early on last Monday, and charged of attempting to burn the stable on High street (the Charles Converse place) where he had been keeping the horse that hauled his bread cart round among customers and where William Wood, the machinist, also keeps a horse. LaRock had been talking so strangely lately that Chief M. J. Walsh began to have suspicions concerning him and thereupon set a watch to catch him if he undertook any crooked business. He talked about being afraid of having the stable and his property burned up because it had been found that he was, or had recently been, a liquor spy. He asked Wood to get his horse insured. LaRock's horse and fixings were well insured, so it is alleged, which with his singular talk set the police on the qui vive. They had been watching him for a week during which one or more attempts had been made to set the barn on fire. The evidence against LaRock was however not considered sufficient by the Chief and the watch went on. But about 2 o'clock on last Monday morning Officer Kean, who had been doing some tall watching, was rewarded with a discovery. The hay had been well saturated with kerosene, an operation which the Officer watched with interest, then the matches were struck and LaRock's alleged face and form shone out in such a way that all doubt as to what was going on and who was doing it was at once removed. Satisfying himself of the authenticity of the work Officer Kean went at it and extinguished the fire, which was no fool's job, saved the property with much effort, reported progress, and secured his man. LaRock was bound over to the Superior Court that same morning in $1500 which he couldn't raise, therefore went to jail.

City Government.

A regular meeting of the Board of Aldermen was held Tuesday evening, Aldermen Russell, Golden and Place absent. Petitions were received as follows: Philip Haggerty, license to clean vaults; E. F. Banks, for sixth-class liquor license, 389 Main street; Burrill Putney, State aid, all referred to committees. C. H. Smith and other fish dealers asked for a hearing on the matter of requiring a license for out-of-town fish dealers. Hearing set for July 22. The Overseers of the Poor reported for June—Families assisted 27, person 105, at an expense of $204.31. The matter of an appropriation for the 39th Massachusetts Infantry Association, recommended to the committee. Ordered that a portion of Montvale Avenue be relocated as asked for by G. F. Bean and others. Under the head of unfinished business, the Clerk read the Mayor's communication removing Daniel J. McGiver as a police officer of this city. No one offering a suggestion from the floor, the Mayor said it was proper and necessary for the Board to take some action on his removal of the officer. A hearing had been held, and his action should be confirmed or something done. On motion of Alderman Kenney it was voted to ballot yes or no upon sustaining the Mayor's action and it resulted in a unanimous vote sustaining the Mayor's action. The application of B. S. Devlin & Co. for a liquor license was laid over. Dartmouth street, Longwood and Dexter Avenues, Ward 6, were accepted as public highways. Adjourned to next Tuesday evening.

Housekeepers laugh right out when the groceryman shows them some unknown brand of soap, and tells them that it is the best, the cheapest and finer than ever soap was before. They laugh because well they know perfection cannot be improved upon, and as they know Brussels soap is perfection, both in its cleansing and its lasting qualities, they will have no other.

The four o'clock meeting last Sunday was led by Mr. Harry Carter of Amherst College.

All men, of all ages and nationality are invited to attend the Gospel meeting at 8 p. m. on Saturday.

Next Sunday's 4 o'clock Men's meeting will be under the charge of the Religious Workers Committee.

Tuesday evening the regular meeting of the Board of Directors was well attended. The various committees gave their reports of the work, and plans were made for the work of the coming fall and winter.

The Summer Encampment at North Lubec commences Aug. 9. North Lubec is a delightful spot on the coast of Maine. There are sail and row boats for the sailor. Fish and game for the angler and hunter. And fine roads for the horseman and bicyclist. If you wish to go you can obtain membership tickets of the General Secretary.

Boston Harbor viewed by moonlight with a good natured, well-behaved crowd, the occasion enlivened by first-class instrumental and vocal music, has been the delightful experience of hundreds of the friends of the Cambridge Association each summer for the past four summers. This year the committee have again secured the staunch steamer, Longfellow. The date selected is Thursday, July 31. The moon is expected to be on its good behavior, and if the calendar is to be depended on, the conditions will be perfect. Steamer leaves Battery Wharf at 7 p. m. Lynn and Woburn will accompany us. Tickets only fifty cents from Boston, 75 cents from Woburn. Young men take notice that this event is not for men only. Tickets on sale now at the Rooms. Party limited to 350.

A Freedom Party.

Mr. and Mrs. Jacob M. Ellis gave their son Arthur Clinton Ellis a great party and made him some handsome presents last Monday evening at their elegant home, No. 25 Salem street, in token of his arriving at majority on that date. Neighbors and friends were present in goodly numbers by whom a very pleasant evening was spent. Numerous representatives of the Belvedere Club, of which the young gentleman is a member, were also seen among the large company. Mr. and Mrs. Ellis, by the hand of Mr. Elmore A. Pierce, who is glib and eloquent of tongue, gave their son a costly gold watch, chain and charm; and President John F. Carley, for the Belvedere Club, presented him with a solid gold headed umbrella. The presents were handsome and valuable, and were bestowed on as worthy a young man as there is in Woburn.

A choice collation was served which after an earnest and pleasant discussion of the age, and some excellent music, the very agreeable affair came to an end.

Mass. Char. Mech. Ass'n.

This organization has been purely an unselfish one. Its Managers for nearly hundred years have given freely of their time with no other compensation than the satisfaction following from the performance of worthy acts. Since its organization it has expended hundreds of thousands of dollars in unostentatious charity besides expending large sums for the encouragement of the mechanic art.

Its Managers are now engaged in preparing for another exhibition of Industry, Skill and Art, to be held in October and November of this year. The prospect is most encouraging. Large numbers of applications have been received covering the whole range of New England industries. The Women Art and Industry Society will include specimens of every line of business and commendable occupation in which women are engaged. The Art galleries will contain a large and valuable collection of rare paintings and other works of Art. Music of the highest order will be heard day and evening, and the exhibition promises to be of great value to visitors and exhibitors alike.

From the Sunday Herald of the 20th instant we clip the following concerning our fellow-citizen, Benjamin Champney, from the letter of it:

White Mountain correspondent:

I met Mr. Benjamin Champney the other morning starting out for the second time that day to go a fishing. Artist's Brook was to be his fishing ground, but to his vexation, after he had walked away up above the falls, and was about to begin fishing, he discovered that he had left his bait at home. It was a hot day, but he went back for it, and was trudging along back again through the dust when I saw him. Whether or not he was rewarded with the good luck he certainly deserved I am unable to report. He asked me to call in at his studio and see a painting that had just been sold to Mr. Fred Whiting of the Herald. The artist has named it "The Forest of Arden," and he obtained his conception of it from the scene in "As You Like It," at Daly's last winter. It is a beautiful picture of an avenue in a grand old forest. It has a dreamy, delicious atmosphere, and along the broad way, and off in the alluring distance in the depths of the wood, the ground lies bathed in soft, golden light. A great tree in the foreground at the beginning of the avenue, and the dreamy, romantic sentiment of the whole, reminded me of the lovely scene in "Joan of Arc," as I saw it in Germany, where the maid stood alone under the vast talking oak and addressed a pining invocation to the dear loved scenes of her childhood, beginning:

"Leit wohl ihr Berge, ihr geliebten Triften, die traulichen Hügelchen, die ich liebte!"

"Paradise valley, ye beloved pastures, Ye dear, still valleys, fare ye well!"

Tries to Console Itself.

The Boston Courier says: The Boston Advertiser tries to console itself for the outpouring of Boston to St. Louis.

"It is not by her census roll," says the philosopher, "that Boston is ambitious to be known and remembered."

Upon which the New York Sun remarks as follows: "Bully for Boston! While all can boast of brain and mind, Sullivan and Cook, her necklace of beads will be more illustrious than the violet crown of the elder Athens. What if Baltimore and St. Louis have a few more men, women and children? In those ungodly places you can get claret and soda in the drug shops. But for the drink, in Boston, too, is the town made to make it glorious? Depend on it, the drink of Boston will never cease to shine up the toilsome steep of Fame."

Mason's Fruit Jar at 63c. a dozen, and "Fruit of the Loom" bleached cotton, at 84c. a yard, are specimens of the prices quoted in the "Lean Pocket Book" sale advertised on our local page this week.

Hollander, Bradshaw & Folsom's Department Store where this sale is taking place is noted for its offerings of standard goods, at down cellar prices.

Gen. Banks Will Run Again.

WASHINGTON, July 10.—[Special.]—J. J. McCarthy has not succeeded in getting a ship for the Charleston navy yard, but he has seen Gen. Banks and announced exactly what The Record announced two months ago, that Gen. Banks expects to run again in the fifth district, if the bill (to place him on the retired list) does not pass the house. Gen. Banks' term here has been a pleasant one, and his speeches, though few in number, have always been listened to with much attention. He has a clerk (as he is chairman of a house committee) and his work is not especially arduous. He lives very quietly and easily in a little house in the eastern part of the city, and has received from taking any active part in the social life at Washington. This life seems to suit him, and he would, as The Record has already stated, be unwilling to retire unless he were placed on the retired list of the army.

A child is not nourished in proportion to the bulk of food he receives into his stomach; he is only nourished by the food he can digest. Every atom of Mellin's Food is assimilable and nourishing. It contains in proper proportions those nutritious and phosphoric matters which are so essential for the healthy growth of a child.

"Have you washed your feet?" You think this is a queer question to ask, but it is one that many Mammams have got in the habit of asking the boys and girls as "Have you washed your hands?"

And why? Because it has been almost impossible to get stockings that wouldn't croak and fade!

But alas! for Pearlina.

We have got a Line of Stockings Worth much more than many so-called "Fast Blacks," which will please the Mammams and the boys and girls as well, and not cost any more. Sizes to fit everybody from baby to grandmamma.

Pearlina has its place but it will not have to be used to wash out the stains left by the "LIN-WORTH."

Literary Notices.

THE COTTAGE HUSBAND for August is a fine number. The contents are fresh and entertaining. There is a great deal in the number that the women ought to know about because it bears on their everyday life in all its departments. There is nothing cheap about this magazine except its subscription price. We give THE JOURNAL ($2.00 a year) and THE COTTAGE HUSBAND ($1.50 a year) for $2.00 IN ADVANCE.

HARPER'S MONTHLY for August is a handsomely illustrated number, there being no less than 8 papers in it whose interest is much enhanced by the excellent work bestowed on them by the artist. The literary contents of the issue are of the best quality. Port Tarascon is continued; Edward Everett Hale has an interesting paper called Magellan and the Pacific; Street Life in India; A Walk up the Avenue; An Impression—these are a few of the large number of entertaining articles which the August HARPER'S contains.

*HARPER'S is sold by the New England News Company, 14-20 Franklin street, Boston, and by Sparrow Horton at the Old Woburn Bookstore.

The numbers of LITTLE'S LIVING AGE for July 12th and 19th contain A Visit to a Great Estate, and Distinction, Dante in his Relation to the Theology & Ethics of the Middle Ages, A Kenish Pilgrim Road, and Vermin in England, Sultan Abdul Hamid, by Professor Vambery, Jamaica, The Gods of Greece, by J. R. Morley, Some Indian Wild Beasts, and The Art and Mystery of Collaboration, George Wither, In the Brazilian Capital, Notes of a Pilgrimage, Mr. Putnam on Disunion, The Lady Wrangler, and The Effect of the New Careers on Women's Happiness, with instalments of The Strange Occurrences in Cauterstone Jail, and Lloyd Courtenay's Banishment, and Poetry. For fifty-two numbers of sixty-four large pages each; the subscription price ($8) is low. Little and Co., Boston, are the publishers.

The complete novel in LIPPINCOTT'S MAGAZINE for August is contributed by that popular English author, Mrs. Alexander. The story is entitled What Gold Cannot Buy. The many readers of Mrs. Alexander's The Wooding of O, Her Dearest Foe, and other charming stories will devour with pleasure this new and captivating romance. It is the story of a plucky young English girl who goes out as the companion of an elderly and aristocratic matron. There are capital descriptions of English country life among the higher classes, and the story gradually leads up to a startling and unexpected denouement.

Law's Tennis for Women is the title of an article which will greatly interest all lady players. It is written by those famous lady players, Miss Bertha L. Townsend and Miss Margaret Lyman Ballard, for years the champions of the United States. Lawn Tennis is the most widely popular of all outdoor games among both men and women, and much has been written about it, but so far only from a man's point of view. Women's play of course differs essentially from that of men. This article is written with the object of improving the play among women, and should be read by every lady player. Some of the other papers are: Veiled, Ebb and Flow, Contemporary Biography, Women, The Philadelphia Academy of Natural Sciences, etc. Published by Lippincott, Philadelphia.

The weather was slightly glacial during the fore part of the week for camping, especially near the sea.

Our town has not gained in population the last 10 years nearly as much as we all thought it had. There has been a large number of dwellings built here since the last State census was taken and yet the increase of inhabitants for 1885 to 1890 was less than from 1880 to 1885. I give you the figures:

From 1880 to 1885, 588

From 1885 to 1890, 457

From 1880 to 1890, 1045

Or only 100 yearly gain since 1880. I think there is a screw loose somewhere in this census business.

To talk now about the 4th of July at Winchester seems to be in the nature of a "Day After the Fair," nevertheless there was one feature of it which I will venture to bring up for a few words of commendation for the reason, principally, that so little mention has been made of it in the public prints. I refer to the entertainment given for the pleasure of the children in the Town Hall in the afternoon. It was one of prettiest and most interesting parts of the whole celebration and as highly enjoyed, particularly by Winchester people. The committee who had the affair in hand and carried it out so successfully were Messrs. F. W. Lawson, E. H. Rice and John Carter, the chief pusher being Mr. Lawson, who fairly drove on young 'uns. The Town Hall was filled to its utmost capacity with delighted spectators, and the entertainment consisted of an exhibition of Lovett's "Living Pictures," feats of Legerdemain, Ventriloquism, etc., and passing judgment and awarding prizes to the most beautifully decorated boy of Winchester and the most beautifully decorated girl, who decorations were in leaves, wild flowers, etc., and the one to whom the first prize was awarded received a handsome and costly gold medal, and the second, a silver one. There was a great variety of decorations, much taste was displayed in the arrangement of the flowers and leaves over the boys and girls, and the exhibition was a fine one. Indeed, it was so highly enjoyed that next year it will be repeated on a much larger scale.

General Sherman's Mule.

In a conversation with Judge Joseph Cox, who is a very pleasant talker and full of anecdotes and information, he said: "I was talking to Gen. W. F. Sherman, several years ago, about riding horses and mules, and he said: 'Cox, a mule is the easiest animal to ride in the world. I always preferred to ride one during the war. In a picture representing the burning of Atlanta the artist has me seated on a fiery steed, with fury in his eye, etc., while the house and the mule and the soldiers are tearing up the railroad iron. Well, I was there; but I was straddled on a plain, common, everyday mule.'"

But of course it would ruin a historical picture to put a general on a mule instead of a fiery charger.—Cincinnati Porcupine.

Religious Dogs.

The famous St. Bernard dogs are very carefully trained. A traveler who visited some of the monasteries of the monks of St. Bernard a few years ago found the monks teaching their dogs from the earliest stages of puppyhood. Not only is physical and mental training included in the teaching, but spiritual culture is by no means neglected. At meal time the dogs sit in a row, each with a tin dish before him containing his repast. Grace is said by one of the monks; the dogs sit motionless with bowed heads. Not one stir until the "Amen" is spoken. If a frisky puppy partakes of his meal before grace is over an older dog growls and gently tugs his ear.—New York Ledger.

Value of Good Clothes.

I once heard a gentleman tell this story: "I believe that clothes never made the man," said he, "until I started out in life for myself. I was rather indifferent then regarding my attire—in fact, I think it might have been deemed shabby. Well what was the consequence? Every hotel that I went to made me pay in advance if I stayed but a single night. I noticed then that others with better clothes than mine were treated with greater confidence. I took the hint and braced up, and would you believe it, I could remain at a strange hotel for three and four weeks after that and never be presented with a bill?"

It is easier to shake the thirst of a bottomless barrel than to get along without Brussels soap.

It is so Understood, Etc.

It is understood that Gen. Banks will not seek a re-nomination to Congress this fall, whether he is put on the army retired list or not. But Gen. Banks should be on this latter list. He is an old man, has been a faithful public official in both a civic and military sense, and the great American Republic can richly afford to deal generously with him.—Cambridge Press.

Imposing.

It is doubtless true that the carriages containing the crippled veterans will add inordinately to the pomp of the Grand Army procession, but there will be nobody in the line who will better deserve to be there than they. The scars of battle are even more honorable than epaulettes, and they will be apt to elicit quite as many plaudits.—Boston Herald.

with the cold courtesy which always made her feel as if he were encased in an armor of ice.

"No," said the little lady, courageously; "but it's about your nephew Mr. Leonard Carlyon," and she told the story of Ellen O'Brien and her wrongs.

"He ought to pay the money," said Miss Comfort, excitedly. "He must be made to pay the money."

"May I ask, Miss Walker, why you interest yourself so markedly in this affair?" the banker asked with a cold, measured calm, that contrasted strangely with the little woman's heated and flurried.

"In every way of telling me to mind my own business," said Miss Comfort to herself. But, she kept up a hold

"right to cheat a poor woman out of her hard earned money."

"Cheat is a strong word, Miss Walker," observed her landlord.

"It's the only correct word in this case, Mr. Carlyon," retorted Miss Comfort, secretly marvelling at her own courage in thus daring to confront the stately banker.

"Perhaps he is owing something to yourself?" questioned the banker keenly.

"Yes, sir; he is," Miss Comfort made answer. "But it isn't that I came about. I am quite able to attend to my own financial debts, even to lose a little if it should be necessary, but

“This poor woman is friendless and alone.”
Mr. Carlyen glanced at his watch. Miss Comfort turned toward the door.
“I’m very sorry that my time is no longer at my own disposal,” said he, courteously.
“And Miss Comfort went away almost crying.”
“Now I’ve made an enemy of him, as well as Mr. Leotard, and haven’t done the least bit of good,” she thought.
“And he will let the house to some one else in the spring, and—”
“After all, I am not sorry that I did my duty,” said poor Ellen. “What shall I say to her when she comes at 8 o’clock?”
But that evening, just as Miss Comfort was beginning at her pile of account books, a ring came to the door, and Miss Comfort rose up, confused and fluttering.
“Who? Where, pray don’t let me disturb you,” said the banker. “I have only dropped in for a little social call. You showed yourself to me to-day.”

lay in a different light from any in which you have yet appeared." "A dun!" demanded poor Miss Comfort, almost hysterically. "No!—a true-hearted, noble-natured woman!—but you need no longer be surprised. The ill is paid." And now, if you admit at leisure, I'll tell you what I have to say. You must take my evening cup of tea with you."

How pleased and proud Miss Comfort was, as she poured the decoction of fragrant young hyson into her grandmother's cup, decorated with butterflies and oblong scrolls of gilt and violet. And how she kept wondering all the while how Carlyon, the great banker, could take such an interest in her, a poor, lonely, middle-aged wife of a banker, if he had only known Mr. Carlyon seldom came across a true, old heart in his complicated business transactions.

"It's not true," said Mr. Leotard. "My uncle would never make such a fool of himself at his age. Why, he's fifty if he's forty."

"Only a day-dream," said Mrs. Leigh Crewswick, with malicious delight. "But, of course, it must be a great mortification to you, Mr. Leotard, who have always been looked upon as his favorite nephew."

"I'm sorry that poor little old woman who keeps the boarding house. For it's her duty. As true as myself I saw the wedding ring taken at —"

Leopard Carlyon gnawed silent at its mistake. How strangely little circumstances are woven together in life's web, he thought. If he had paid that winning washerwoman's bill, she would not have confided her woes to Miss Comfort Walker; and Miss Comfort Walker would not have gone to which, if half were facts, would make a fellow's hair stand on end to think of being compelled to sleep in open air in any part of northern South America. The facts seem to be that there is a species of bat, phyllostoma spectrum, inhabiting the Central American republics and South America as far south as the Yakada, which if pressed for food will fasten itself on animals and the exposed parts of the human body for the purpose of sucking blood.

That sleeping persons are not awakened by the bat, and that the incisions through which blood is drawn readily heal, should be taken as proof positive that the vampire bat stories, like the human vampire stories of Hun-

A recent traveler (Clarke, 1888) says: "I have slept out in the open air in the hilly country in all kinds of weather: in the night, indeed, yes, thousands, of vampire bats, have always found them perfectly harmless, as much so as the native black but of Pennsylvania and York state."—St. Louis Republic.

Government.

Food Value of Fresh Fruit.

We do not attach to fresh fruit the food value it actually bears; for instance, bananas. A keen social analyst has said that the habits and obligations of civilized life are purely a question of geography, and the uses of food are so absolutely. In that wonderful record of perils and triumphs, "In Darkest Africa," Stanley cites among his chief resources against starvation bananas, plantains and a large variety of pineapple. From days too painfully near starvation, when two bananas daily was all the food he could allow himself, to that time of plenty when the foragers

• Forests of Europe and Africa.

"Since I have made my map," said Explorer Henry Stanley in an address to the Royal Geographical society, "I have taken the trouble to measure the extent of the area covered by this forest and I find it to be something like 224,000,000 acres; and if we allow each tree thirty feet around for sufficient space, and only forty-eight trees to the acre, we have the colossal figure of 10,752,000,000 as the total number, and if we calculate the plants and saplings of the impenetrable undergrowth we shall be among the incalculable billions."

There are occasional gleams of humor even in the most serious articles which newspapers ever publish. A recent one on "The Business Outlook" contained the following paragraph:

"Thanks to the administration's want of foresight the dry weather of the past season has become exceedingly monotonous to the agricultural interest."

The journal does not explain how the government could have prevented a drought in a portion of the country, or a wet season in another. Perhaps it thinks that the government ought to have some influence with its own weather.

This criticism brings to mind the not unfamiliar criticism of a western farmer in a season of heavy rains.

"Rain, rain, rain," said the farmer, "it is this what we get for electin' our governor last fall!"

YOUTH'S COMPANION.

The Old Creeds and the New.

Diseased Pork.

Many persons who never venture to eat pork on account of its alleged unwholesomeness will deny themselves the use of bacon and ham under the belief that when cured the much abused flesh of the pig is purified of all its noxious qualities. They can now, unfortunately, no longer maintain this position, for recent investigation has shown that salting or pickling seems to have little, if any, destructive effect upon the common forms of bacilli which are found in diseased meat. Experiment showed that such meat, after being in pickle for two months, exhibited multitudes of these living germs. The experiments were being carried out with care, but it is not stated whether or not meat which has been subjected to the operation of smoking as well as pickling is freed from its disease provoking germs.—

An unclesciential and broad minded clergyman whom we will call Smith was walking down Broadway in company with a friend whom we will call Jones. Pretty soon they met an acquaintance of Jones, who presented his clerical companion in these words:—
“Let me introduce you to my friend, the Rev. Mr. Smith, who as you may know, makes divinity his specialty.”
“Pardon me for making a correction,” said Mr. Smith laughing, “but if I make a specialty of anything it is humanity rather than divinity.” This answer shows the very marked line of cleavage between the old and the new religion of the day. The clergyman thought so much of the attributes of God that they had little time to think of man; while the latter pay so much attention to man that they have little room in their system for abstract speculations about God.

Remarkable Rescue.

Mrs. Michael Curtin, Plainfield, Ill., makes the statement that she caught cold, which settled on her lungs; she was treated for a month by her family physician, but grew worse. He told her she was hopeless of cure, and that she must have a medicine that would cure her. Her druggist suggested Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption; she bought a bottle and to her delight found herself benefited from first dose. She continued its use and after taking ten bottles, found herself sound and well, now does her household work, and is able to go out and attend to her usual duties.

Why Is It Popular.

Because it has proven its absolute merit over and over again, because it has an unequalled record of cures, because its business is conducted in a thoroughly honest manner, and because it combines economy and strength, being the only medicine of which $100 Does (One Dollar) is true—the strongest lung medicine in the world's Sarsaparilla the most successful medicine of the day.

It is rather significant that the English should send the Grenadiers to Bermuda just now. They seem exceedingly anxious to get that garrison strengthened. But Uncle Sam does not seem over anxious about this increase of troops in his immediate vicinity.

The well-known manager of excursions to Washington, California, and the White Mountains, J. A. Whitcomb, says: "I have never had anything do me so much good as a glass Sulphur Bitters. It is the best spring medicine I ever used, and I would advise all who suffer from biliousness and dyspepsia use Sulphur Bitters, for I know they are pure."

The Woburn Journal

FRIDAY, AUGUST 1, 1890.

The Journal is for sale at the stores of Sparrow Horton, 705, Main Street, Charles R. Brown, 161 Main Street, John Cummings, 42, Commercial Street, Samuel E. Wyman, W. A. Hanson, North Woburn, and at G. P. Brown's Warehouse.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

All advertisements to insure insertion in this paper, must be handed in as early as 10 o'clock on Thursday forenoon.

OUR GROWTH.

The figures which we reproduce in another column of the JOURNAL from a computation made by Chief Wadlin of the Bureau of Statistics and Labor respecting the population of this city and its growth during the last 10 years cannot but prove to be in the highest degree gratifying to those who care anything about the prosperity of the place. The increase of the number of inhabitants was as surprising as pleasing to most people for the conviction was quite general that, by reason of causes which could not be controlled, the report of the census-takers would be anything but a flattering one or one that we should be likely to feel much pride in.

The figures are very encouraging. They show that our city is making splendid progress in the right direction—it is growing in population, and additional ones will of course show that it is growing in business and wealth. This with a handsome reduction in the rate of taxation ought to give Woburn a boom this year.

There is everything to encourage the business men of Woburn to cordially join hands and work for its future prosperity. If our citizens will unite as one man to keep home business at home and not bestow so much of their patronage on Boston; if they will join together to advance the interests of home industries; if they will put their shoulders to the wheel and increase their efforts to secure a greater variety of them; if they will only give "a long pull, a strong pull, and a pull all together," when the next State census is taken, in 1895, it will be found that this city has distanced all competitors in its growth of population, business, and wealth.

THE LAWRENCE TORNADO.

At about 10 o'clock last Saturday forenoon a very destructive tornado struck South Lawrence and No. Andover, 15 miles northeast of this city, and in both localities did a great deal of damage. Some six or eight lives were lost and 30 or 40 people were more or less injured, many of them seriously. A large number of buildings, among them the Catholic church, were unroofed, shattered, or totally destroyed in South Lawrence and some at No. Andover, and the loss of property, on which there was no tornado insurance, was very great.

In the locality visited were the homes of many factory operatives, on which class the loss in death, personal injury and property principally falls. They were most, new residences, generally the abode of peace and plenty, but in a moment scores of them were swept away before the irresistible force of the cyclone.

The tornado, which was accompanied by a powerful rain and terrific thunder and lightning, lasted only a few seconds, but in its march from the No. Lawrence station of the Boston & Maine Railroad, due east to No. Andover, almost every obstacle encountered was torn to pieces and levelled to the ground.

It was estimated that from 40,000 to 50,000 people visited the scene of the cyclone on Sunday.

OF COURSE.

The re-nomination of State Auditor Ladd by the Republicans is not only a foregone conclusion but is very desirable from any standpoint. Efficiency and honesty in a public office are very desirable.—Boston Journal.

Not to nominate State Auditor Ladd, one of the most efficient and faithful of all the Commonwealth's officers, would be a great mistake.

But then, nobody contemplates such a thing, and any other kind of talk is idle.

IN HONOR OF THE OCCASION.

Very wisely and patriotically, we think, the city government have ordered that Municipal Building, the seat of our government, shall be closed on August 12 in honor of the great National G. A. R. parade which is to take place in Boston that day.

It was due to the two Posts in this city that such action should be taken.

REPUBLICAN STATE CONVENTION.

The State Committee held a meeting last week and made arrangements for the Republican State Convention. Wednesday, Sept. 17, was fixed upon as the date for holding it, and Tremont Temple, Boston, as the place.

The Boston Evening Traveller is nothing if not enterprising. It is always wide awake for news and never fails "to get there" on time and in the best of shape. Last Saturday afternoon in gathering up and giving to the public the news of the great tornado at Lawrence the Traveller distanced all competitors. It was the first to have an account of the affair in print and on the streets; it had the fullest and most reliable report of it; and it demonstrated to a dot that when it comes to getting right up and doing things—doing them quicker and better than anybody else—the Traveller is the genuine "Old Reliable" every day in the week, Sundays excepted. Besides all which the Boston Evening Traveller is one of the liveliest and best dailies published in New England.

Complaints against the U. S. Census Bureau on the score of poor work are well high universal. Nobody anywhere appears to be satisfied with the count. An Englishman is at the head of the Bureau, which may or may not have something to do with it.

But Woburn is not grumbling much.

The Suburban Press Association will hold their next meeting and banquet at the Crawford House in Boston on Saturday, Aug. 16. Several distinguished gentlemen are expected to attend the craft on that occasion.

Mrs. Frederic Flint celebrated the 80th anniversary of her birthday yesterday. She is well and as bright and active as person 10 years younger. May she celebrate many more birthday anniversaries.

Mr. Herbert Richardson of Erie, Penn., and family have returned here from the beaches and are stopping at the pleasant residence of Mr. Chandler Parker on Canal street. Mr. Richardson was formerly a "Woburn Boy."

Mr. Alexander Grant will leave tomorrow for Pictou, N. S., his native town, where he will remain a fortnight or so. He will go from Boston to Halifax, N. S., per steamer Halifax, thence to Pictou by rail.

Mr. Grant makes it a practice to visit his mother, who is now 87 years old, at the old homestead, every summer.

Hundreds of people went from this city last Sunday to view the ruins left by the great Lawrence tornado last Saturday morning. Many notes of conveyances were resorted to, and the city was left pretty bare of inhabitants.

Mr. Lewis White, of the Lyceum Building tenorial parlors, has secured the services of a first class hair-cutter and shaver. He ranks at the head of the profession. Particular attention paid to the cutting of ladies' and children's hair.

No clew to the Goddard burglary last week has yet been struck. They made a good haul of gold and silver goods, including a fine gold watch, solid silver table ware, jewelry, etc., and it is very doubtful if any of it is ever recovered.

Mrs. S. T. Converse and daughter of Sherman Place in this city are at their favorite resort again this summer, namely, West Compton, N. H. Both ladies think there is no place like West Compton for genuine summer rest and pleasure.

Mr. Postmaster Reade has succeeded in getting a morning mail for Woburn direct from New York without stopping at Boston. Allow brother Reade time enough and he will give this city a mail service that we may well feel proud of.

Col. A. L. Richardson has gone into it too. Just as soon as the fad struck him he went off and bought a camera and at the rate he is going on a wide picture gallery will be the swift reward of his picture-taking talents and industry.

These are good nights for burglars to operate in. Windows in sleeping apartments are generally left open, not generally so. Look out for open windows if unpleasant visits from burglars would be avoided.

Mr. Waldo Thompson, of the Thompson hardware establishment, wife and Miss Winnie DeLoria have returned from a visit to Nantucket which, they unite in declaring, is the very best place in the world at which to pass the heated term.

Mr. Water Register A. P. Barrett will please accept the JOURNAL's thanks for "comps" to the dramatic entertainment to be given by the St. Charles Minstrels for the benefit of G. A. R. Post 33 in Lyceum Hall on next Monday evening, August 4.

Mr. F. H. Nourse of Winchester is a prominent real estate dealer and auctioneer in Boston and Winchester and does a great deal of business in his line elsewhere in this part of the State. He is considered one of the fairest and most reliable men in the business.

Moses P. Brown of East Boston, Governor of the United Order of Pilgrim Fathers, has appointed Mr. George W. Nichols of 396 Main street, this city, Deputy Governor. A new Colony is now forming for full particulars of which apply to Mr. Nichols.

Notwithstanding the rain Auctioneer Gregory made a capital day last Saturday. It was valued for taxation $1,000, but Gregory, working the business up in energetic style, sold it for $1185. Everybody said it was a fine sale.

Gems of art in Mirrors, Cheval Glasses, Cabinets, Antique Desks, Corner and Reception Chairs, and unique pieces of lovely furniture dangle and almost bewilder the visitor in his first visit to the spacious warehouses of Jaine's Furniture Co., 48 Canal street, Boston.

Dog days began on July 25 and it was a remarkable fact that the weather was in perfect keeping with the almanac. We felt that day the first touch of dog days weather for the summer, and people remarked how unusual it was to have date and temperature so closely agree.

The wedding of Dr. Winn of Winchester and Miss Mary Reade of this city will take place in St. Charles Church next Tuesday evening to be followed by a reception in Music Hall. The elite of this and neighboring cities will be present and witness the ceremonies and participate in the reception.

Mr. John Duncan, Superintendent of the Boston City Company's street cleaning department, is on a trip with the De Molay Commandery of Knights Templars, Somerville through the Old Granite State. They expect to have a big time and Knights seldom fail in their calculations in respect of such matters.

Mr. Francis A. Buckman and family, and Mr. E. G. Clough and family left for Marblehead last night before yesterday where they will remain for a few weeks. Mr. Alvah Buckman and wife will go down next week, when he hopes to be fully recovered from the attack of illness he had last week.

Our esteemed friend, Mr. Marshall Tidd of No. Woburn, and wife started yesterday for a trip through Southern New Hampshire, and will be gone two or three weeks. Mr. and Mrs. Tidd are getting to be quite tourists and it would not surprise us to hear that they had embarked for a European trip.

The street cars on both routes from here will be patronized every day from 5 to 10 o'clock p. m. A trip to Bedford Square, or Malden, or any of the wayplaces, in the cool of the evening, is just as delightful as anything can possibly be. A great many people understand this and govern themselves accordingly every evening.

The grocers of this city have concluded not to observe "Grocers' Day" in the usual form this year, but to join in with the general G. A. R. celebration on Aug. 12, and let it go at that. They do not want two holidays in August and the 12th they are in duty bound to observe in honor of the National G. A. R. encampment in Boston.

The long and severe drought broke all to pieces last Friday whereat the earth and vegetation greatly rejoiced. Not a drop of rain fell during the whole haying season and the crop was never secured in better condition in the world. Just as soon as the haying was well through with the rain came in great abundance and the potato crop will be from fair to middling.

The JOURNAL Book and Job office is complete in all its appointments and has the reputation of turning out the best work and much of it as any printing establishment in Middlesex county. It is fully supplied with presses, all the latest styles of type, stock and men to use them, and gentlemen, your work is respectfully solicited.

Alderman S. B. Goddard returned from Jackson, N. H., last Tuesday evening where he left Mrs. Goddard and her sister Miss Frost, who are enjoying the cool mountain air of that favorite summer resort very much. They will remain there a fortnight or so longer, during which time Mr. Goddard will probably revisit the scene of his last week's pleasures.

Captain William C. Parker of the Woburn Mechanic Phalanx (Co. G, 5th Regt. M. V. M.), with Mr. C. E. Osgood of Somerville, went down to Providence, R. I. last Monday evening and on Tuesday accepted an invitation from a crack yachting club there to take a cruise and a big yachting dinner, both of which were highly enjoyed by Capt. Parker and Mr. Osgood.

We are indebted to Messrs. B. B. Brown & Co., No. 10 Faneuil Hall Square, Boston, per Mr. B. B. Brown of this city, senior member of the firm, for a bottle of Worcestershire Sauce, and another of Pepper Relish, the latter put up by B. B. B. personally. For which evidence of good will Brown & Co. and Mr. Brown will please accept the JOURNAL's best thanks.

Assessors Col. Grammer, Ferguson and Prior did the handsome thing by the JOURNAL last week in furnishing important information respecting the tax rate this year. The figures were what the tax-payers desired to see, realizing which fact the accommodating Assessors here mentioned kindly furnished them on request, for which they will please accept the JOURNAL's thanks.

On next Monday evening, Aug. 4, the St. Charles Minstrels will give a concert at Lyceum Hall for the benefit of Post 33, G. A. R., to which the price of tickets has been fixed at 35 cents. This combination has every one of many fine musical entertainments in this city. It is composed of first-rate talent and a most excellent performance may be expected from them next Monday evening.

Mrs. Elizabeth McDonald, proprietor of Hotel Windsor in this city, started last Wednesday evening for New York city where she intended to remain a day or so and then to take one of the floating palaces on the Hudson and voyage up that romantic and delightful river to Albany. She is well known at Saratoga and such other resorts as may be calculated to gratify her fancy for travel and sight-seeing. Her trip will include a visit to the White Mountains of course.

After an illness of several months Alderman Michael Golden died at his home at Montvale last Tuesday of Bright's disease. He had been superintendent of the B. & L. freight yards in Boston for many years; was formerly a member of the Woburn Board of Selectmen, and represented Ward 5 in the Board of Aldermen ever since the incorporation of the city, and was esteemed an honest, upright man and good citizen. He left a wife and several children to mourn his death.

Bristol, N. H., is getting to be a famous resort for Boston and suburban people. The JOURNAL has recorded the arrival there of numerous representatives of Woburn's best society. Last week Mrs. Marcellus Littlefield (wife of the accomplished reporter of the Boston Herald), Mrs. John Ferguson (wife of the Commodore who is at the head of the Almshouse Committee), and her daughter Mabel, went up to that choice country retreat for a good time and at last accounts they were having it.

Assessor John Ferguson, whose official station requires him to make and keep notes of the same, says almost anybody would be surprised to go over this city and ascertain how many buildings have been erected during the past year. There have been so many of them that their aggregate value more than offsets the loss on personal property chiefly occasioned by the inactivity in the factories of James Skinner & Co., Eustice Cummings & Co., Bryant & King, and others.

Thomas Beatty, the well known athlete of this city, was one of the participants in the sports at the Lynn Lesters Union picnic, held at Lake Walden last Monday, and made quite an addition to an already considerable record in the line of athletic sports. He took first prize in the standing and three long jumps and was defeated in one heat in the 135 yard handicap of 48 entries where he received a start of only 5 1-4 yards ahead of Mills and Bowen, two of America's best sprinters.

The following are the officers (elected last Monday evening) of the Woburn Mutual Benefit Association, an insurance Order recently established here: President, John G. Maguire; Vice President, Elmore A. Pierce; Clerk, Charles K. Conn; Treasurer, Lawrence Reade; Directors, John I. Munroe, James L. Pihlak, Isaac A. Moore, Edward J. Gregory, Myron B. Field, George W. Nichols, Elliot L. Packard, Elmore A. Pierce, Lawrence Reade. Bylaws were adopted and an application made for a charter.

Mr. B. F. Kimball of No. Woburn received a letter from Rev. Charles Anderson, formerly pastor of the No. Woburn Congregational Church, but for the last two years a professor in Robert College, Constantinople, Turkey, of which his brother-in-law, Mr. Washburn, is President and his father-in-law, Rev. Dr. Hamlin, was the founder, which contained the gratifying intelligence that Pastor Anderson and his family were all well and expected to do so far away from their native soil. President Washburn has been in America nearly a year during which period Prof. Anderson has had the principal charge of the College, for the proper discharge of the duties of which position he is abundantly able. There are many people in Woburn who would like to see Rev. and Mrs. Anderson again.

From present appearances the auction sale of real estate on Academy Hill tomorrow afternoon by Auctioneer Prior will be largely attended by men of means who are after the most desirable residence property in this city. The JOURNAL, by error, stated that the lot lies between Capt. Crane's and the estate of J. H. Cummings; it should have said, between Capt. Crane's and the new house of Mr. Wilbur Cummings, for there is where it is. Mr. Skelton's advertisement conveys full information respecting the property and the reader is referred to the same. There can be doubt at all but that somebody will get a big bargain in the lot, for it is going to be sold anyhow.

Last Tuesday Mr. Waterman Brown, historian of the Boston & Lowell Railroad, and its faithful employee from the beginning of it to the present time, submitted for our inspection "An Act" passed by the General Court of Massachusetts, April 14, 1852, to discontinue the old Middlesex canal and dissolve the Company owning it, which was incorporated by an Act of said General Court passed June 22, 1793. The document is endorsed "House—No. 182," and is the printed report of the Committee on Railways and Canals issued, as is the custom, for the use of the members. The act was passed and the old Middlesex canal corporation went out of existence on April 14, 1852, and the canal itself gradually filled.

The fish dealers of Woburn believe in the home market principle, and are petitioning the home government to put a heavy tariff (license) on the out of town peddlers who come there to dispose of their raw material (fish). These fish dealers have nothing to say about the Woburnites who go into the neighboring cities and towns to traffic. However, the principle of spending your money among your own merchants, as far forth as you can, is a good one and to be commended.—Lynn Bee. Aye; when the business is brought right home to our individual pockets we are all good proponent tariff people. Every mother's son of us believes in looking out for No. One first, and that is the bedrock idea of a National protective tariff.

Capt. Frank Wellock, of Boston pilot-boat No. 2, and wife came over from their home at East Boston a few days ago, well recuperated and strengthened themselves on a lot of good, substantial food found at the residence of the JOURNAL folks on Church Avenue. Capt. Wellock is one of the oldest Boston pilots in point of service, although by far from being the oldest in years, and if there is anything connected with getting in and out of Boston Harbor, or with anything of a good distance beyond it, that he doesn't know all about it then it must be something that isn't laid down in the charts or contained in nautical works. He has been all over it a thousand times and staid there all night too. They were accompanied by Miss Emma Busell of 21 Chelsea St., East Boston.

Mr. John Cummings 2nd, the popular Cummingsville grocer, laid a sample of English gooseberries on the Editorial table last Wednesday which were worthy of more than a passing notice. On an average the individual berries were about the size of walnut, of a very dark color, extremely juicy, and about as sweet as honey—sweeter than hand-made honey or city manufactured maple sugar. The English gooseberry was introduced here only a couple or three years ago, but it has earned a right, by its prolific yield, size, and excellent quality, to the protection of the American Flag and exercise of American suffrage. Neighbor Cummings sets up the claim (in a mild sort of way, to be sure) that nobody else in Woburn has the knack of making these gooseberries grow so large and sweet as he does!

The young man or woman who expects to get ahead in the world at the present day without being a rapid writer, quick at figures, and practical accountant, will find it exceedingly difficult to enter into competition with those who have had special training in these departments. The Burdett Business College whose announcement appears on page 3 fits young people in three months and upwards to all positions as accountants, cashiers, stenographers and typewriters. The many young people in this city who have been assisted to good situations by the Principals who are Woburn residents, together with the general commendation of its methods of individual instruction by our Supt. of Schools, High School Principals, and others, is double assurance that any promises made by its Principals will be more than fulfilled.

Last Wednesday was a date of accidents in this city. A few minutes past 1 o'clock, P. M., Peter McK

Y. M. C. A.

BY THE GENERAL SECRETARY.

We invite any man who wishes to come to our prayer service at 8 o'clock Saturday evening.

Sunday at 4 o'clock we are to hear a man who was a skeptic but is now a believer and we desire that any man who is skeptical shall be present in Concert Hall.

August 10, we propose to hold at 4 o'clock a Mass Meeting. We invite all. We are expecting help from the neighboring cities and intend to make it one of the best mass meetings ever given. Remember August 10, 4 o'clock.

One more word about North Lubec. If you are in want of a place to do not know where to go we entreat you to go there. Why? not because we shall have the benefit of it, but because you will. The Hotel is really and if any are going they should send in their names at once. Get membership passes from the General Secretary so as to secure the reduced rates. Fare $4.00 round trip; $1 for passage; Hotel rates from $1 per day to $1.50 according to room; which makes round trips only $12 one week, including fare, $19 for two weeks.

The question often arises: What is the extent of the Y. M. C. A.? We give the following facts:

In United States and Canada,	1,341
In Colleges,	82
Railroad branches,	10
German branches,	36
Colored men,	31
Indian,	16
Total,	1,785

Value of property owned by Association, including libraries and furniture, $10,433, 647.

In addition there is pledged towards building, $1,500,000.

Expended for local current expenses last year, $1,045,750.

Expenses for International and State work $182,000.

Secretary and assistants engaged in the work, 1,005.

And this has been accomplished since 1844, or the last 45 years, for it was then that the young, clerical, and laymen, brought to light the Young Men's Christian Association for the first time.

In these days of societies for reforming everybody and almost everything it is really a relief to have some one realize that there is something to be gained by perfecting one's self independent of any society. It is therefore with genuine pleasure that we call our readers' attention to the advertisement headed "Self Improvement" on our local page this week.

Waterman Brown's Bear.

At divers and sundry times we have been asked to publish the following letter written by once one of the leading citizens of Woburn, now deceased, but it has only been within a few days past that we have been able to procure it from Mr. Brown. By those who know Mr. Brown, and now know Mr. Brown, the letter will be read with interest.

Woburn, Mass., Dec. 23, 1869.

My Dear Brown: I have great pleasure in saying that about a recent visit to your good city of Woburn I found myself pleasantly conversed with a few of your old and well tried friends. Your early history, so full of stirring events, the pure habits of your ancestors, your culture and refined tastes, and the general geniality of your character formed a topic of rich discussion. It was decided that, among your many acquaintances and happy characteristics, that you should be the subject of a paper. I was glad to see you so well represented on the hotel register of the Woburn Spring House, for among the arrivals here from that city last week were Mr. and Mrs. S. Frankfort Trull, Mr. Eliot F. Trull, Miss Bertha P. Trull, Master Clifford Trull and nurse, Mrs. Deborah G. Trull, Mr. and Mrs. H. Davis Smith, Miss Susan Edgell, Miss Evelyn Trull, Mr. W. Fred Howarth, Miss Hattie Bowditch, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Trull, Mr. John T. Trull, and Miss Josephine S. Trull.

Mr. Henry N. Sawyer frequently runs up from Boston to get a breath of fresh air. Mine Host Trull is one in a thousand, and with his good wife is ever on the alert for the comfort of his guests.

Nayal Officer Frank D. Currier and his wife are frequent visitors here.

A number of Boston people have already secured rooms for August which is one of the pleasantest months here.

If you don't know where to get pleasant quiet, delightful outdoor surroundings, charming indoor hospitality, for an outing over Sunday, for a week, a month, or with his good wife is ever on the alert for the comfort of his guests.

Happy in having been permitted to participate in so many facilities to science as well as in having an old friend, we remain yours very truly,

D. D. HART and others.

"Have you washed your feet?"

You think this is a queer question to ask, but it is one that many Mammas have got in the habit of asking the boys and girls as "Have you washed your hands?"

And Why? Because it has been almost impossible to get Stockings that wouldn't crock and fade.

But alas! for Pearlina.

We have got a Line of Stockings Worth much more than many so called "Fast Blacks," which will please the Mammas and the boys and girls as well, and not cost any more. Sizes to fit everybody from baby to grandmamma.

Pearlina has its place but it will not have to be used to wash-out the stains left by the "LINWORTH."

Cruelly to Dogs.

EDITOR WOBURN JOURNAL: In reading a late copy of the Journal, I may be said to fall upon the official notice of your city agent the "muzzling" and "restraining" of dogs during the midsummer months and as a native and old resident of Woburn I beg a bit of space in the columns of your paper to utter my protest against such an unjust and cruel edict as noted above.

I am surprised that the wise and sensible Mayor of Woburn (proven so in divers ways) should have given his official consent and seal to such an act, for he ought to know that to muzzle a dog, especially in hot weather, deprives him of the act and privilege of perspiring and of refreshing himself with water at will. The dog perspires only through, and at his mouth and to muzzle him is an act of absolute cruelty.

The dog is a very nervous animal and very sensitive to kind, or cruel treatment. The "mad dog" scare is a very groundless one and it is a wonder that otherwise sensible people can be found so utterly credulous and timid of such a rare trouble and disease as rabies, or hydrophobia. It may exist but, as above stated, is so rare that in a lifetime a case may not be known. I state with authority that there have been only two cases in this State during the last eight years. Fear and terror (commonly called "lock-jaw") and bad blood cause the many cases of hydrophobia reported. I have been bitten often by my own and strange dogs and the only effect has been a scar.

There are few dogs so wicked as to injure any one; the fault in most cases is with the man, woman or child and not the dog. If a dog is tormented, worried, insulted or otherwise ill treated he naturally retaliates but he has no hydrophobia. The dog is a noble, faithful animal, and if he is otherwise made to suffer by man—infinitely more brutal than he is.

"The more I see of men the better I love dogs" and I hope the dog owners of Woburn will keep their dogs muzzled, or restrained, as kindly and lightly as possible and that soon a more enlightened feeling may prevail as to their brutishness.

"O, let us yet be merciful!"

A Modern Promised Land.

JERUSALEM SPRING HOUSE, CANAAN, N. H., July 18, 1890.

If, in the much told "once upon a time" fable the beautiful nymph of the water were to unite her charms with those of the gallant spirit of the wind and the combined of fairy bliss were each to contribute a share to embellish a home of pleasure and enjoyment, it has often been wondered where this spot would be. Many places have been distinguished, but the fact that others are constantly coming to the front shows conclusively that the much looked-for capital of splendor is as yet a myth of the imagination.

The ideal place is unquestionably that where Nature in all her loveliness reigns supreme, and where Art is present only to make it habitable for man. A place where one may feel that he is of the world and yet not in it. Such is the idea which prevails by those whom fortune has favored with a visit to the Jerusalem Spring House at Canaan, N. H. Here the natural beauties of scenery, woodland, brooks, mountains, drives, walks, and the health-giving qualities of pure spring water, are combined in a fascinating and most enjoyable way. It is still further enjoyable by the hospitable air of the hotel and its easy accessibility by the surrounding world.

Woburn is just now very well represented on the hotel register of the Jerusalem Spring House, for among the arrivals here from that city last week were Mr. and Mrs. S. Frankfort Trull, Mr. Eliot F. Trull, Miss Bertha P. Trull, Master Clifford Trull and nurse, Mrs. Deborah G. Trull, Mr. and Mrs. H. Davis Smith, Miss Susan Edgell, Miss Evelyn Trull, Mr. W. A Visit to Lake Tahoe.

Leaving the Central Pacific at Truckee, 208 miles east of San Francisco, we reach the Lake by a stage ride of 14 miles along the Truckee River, and grand and beautiful scenery along the base of high rocks and picturesque mountains the sides of which are covered with stately pines. In places where the walls recede from the stream are charming little nooks, meadows and valleys, and at almost every turn of the road and river new beauties present themselves to view. There are delightful surprises on every hand over every mile of the road from Truckee to Tahoe city, which town is situated at the outlet of the Lake.

Taking into consideration the surroundings there can hardly be a more beautiful Mountain Lake, lying as it does between the eastern and western summits of the main ridge of the Sierra Nevada Mountains at an elevation of 6247 feet above the level of the sea. Its length is a little over 21 miles. Roughly, it has the form of a parallelogram, lying nearly north and south about one third in Nevada and the remainder in California, and having an area of 204 square miles. Its greatest depth is 1800 feet. It is shut in and surrounded on all sides by mountains that rise from 2000 to 5000 feet above its surface. The Lake evidently occupies an extinct volcano crater of great size. Soundings show in the bottom a deep channel or crevice which extends nearly the whole length of the Lake in a north and south direction. In this the depth is every where from 1500 to 1700 feet. The deepest spot, 1800 feet, is towards the south end of the lake, in front of Mount Tallac. The water is of great clearness and crystal purity, and never freezes. The lake receives the waters of 51 creeks and brooks, the largest of which is the Upper Truckee, which empties in at the south end, the only outlet is the Truckee River.

It is very difficult to swim in the lake on account of the great elevation and reduced atmospheric pressure on the water rendering the lake less buoyant than bodies of fresh water at sea level. The Lake in some respects is treacherous and dangerous. It is subject to sudden heavy squalls; fierce gusts of wind at times rush down from the big canyons causing the water to boil with fury. These squalls are liable to capsize any boat and unless an experienced boatman be of the party, fatal results are almost sure to follow. The bodies of persons drowned in the Lake are never recovered unless very near the shore. The bodies of no less than 12 men are known to lie at the bottom of the Lake, and among them there came very near being that of your correspondent, occurring as follows:

On the afternoon before my departure from the Lake, in company with two fellow tourists, I went out for a farewell fishing trip. Taking a boat at the wharf in front of the Hotel, we rowed out about 1-4 of a mile towards the centre of the Lake, where after a half hour's skillful angling we succeeded in landing a dozen or more "speckled beauties" in the bottom of the boat. Being satisfied with these, we turned our boat homeward. I was seated on a box placed on the small piers, resting in front of the Hotel, when I was told by one of the boatmen that a boat, trolling my line along in the lake, was pulling a cigar and enthusiastically "taking in" the magnificent surrounding scenery, when a 12 pound trout appropriated the hook and insisted on perambulating in the opposite direction. I at first opposed his wishes, but when the boatman suddenly lurched forward, I was thrown into the water. I was suddenly changed my mind, like his, my position, and turning at graceful a somersault as the surrounding circumstances would permit I silently followed his troutship into the water as before stated. The water of this Lake is decidedly difficult to swim in, owing to its extreme dampness, and other scientific reasons too numerous to mention, and after a few spasmodic strokes, cutting off my mouth full of water, I was obliged to quit the water. I previously described crystal pure water. I went down. When I next became acquainted with myself I was being rolled to and fro on the platform in front of the Hotel ostensibly for the purpose of reducing the water supply.

"I told that d—d tenderfoot he would get killed if he didn't take better care of himself" in which I recognized the voice of a bluff old California lumberman who the day before had kindly volunteered this bit of wholesome advice. After passing a moment or two in silent meditation and pleasant reflection, I was assisted to my feet when I apologized to the fast assembled crowd for appearing in public in such a dilapidated condition and referred them "at my expense" to the Hotel Bar for further particulars.

Our earlier trip to Truckee was completed at 10 o'clock the next morning. To the tourist in general, and New England people in particular, should you chance to pass over the Union Pacific Railroad in summer time, stop for a day at Truckee and visit the beautiful mountain Lake. You cannot afford to miss this opportunity.—7334.

W. B. French, Mrs. French, E. B. Hill, Samuel Wells, Frank Wells, John McKay, E. B. Bent, G. S. Huntress, Jr., were registered at the Oregon House, Nantasket, last week.

Mrs. Caldwell and daughter of Reading, Pa., are guests of Mr. J. W. Taylor in this village. The former is 85 years old and was for a long time a resident of Woburn. She thinks it is good to get back to the old home.

Mr. Loring, of Loring & Avery, the extensive leather manufacturers of this place, has cut and housed 120 tons of hay this season from his farms. Not a drop of rain touched the hay, a finer crop of which or a larger one was never harvested in this section of country.

There is nothing that Mr. F. H. Nourse enjoys better than a lively Winchester town meeting—and who ever knew of a Winchester town meeting that was not lively? There was considerable sport in the one held the other day to see what the town would like to do about having a poor farm, or almshouse. There was some sharp sparring between some of the attendants, and if there had been more of it Mr. Nourse would have liked it better. He liked what there was of it—he liked it so well that he managed to have the subject postponed to the next town meeting so that he could get another installment of Winchester sharp talk.

The following valuable information was obtained from reliable sources and will prove of interest: It is noticed in comparing last year's Assessor's report with that of the present, a falling off in the number of poll-tax payers. A year ago there were 1260, while now according to the report there are but 1177, a falling off of 83 polls. The cause of this dropping off is not ascertained. Real estate valuation last year was $3,171,327, while this year it is $3,633,225, a gain of $131,908; personal estate last year $1,031,320, this year $1,063,820, a gain of $31,900, or a grand total gain of $163,808. The amount to be raised by taxation the present year is $84,972.37, from 1889 it was $79,087.40. From this it is clearly seen when the rate of taxation exceeded that of the previous year 70 cents of $1,000, notwithstanding that the town has increased.

Literary Notices.

The numbers of LITTLE'S LIVING AGE for July 26th and August 2d contain The Poetry of John Donne, Mute Witnesses of the Revolution, Charles the Twelfth: a Memoir, by the King of Sweden, The First General Election in Japan, My Islands, and Nero and St. Benedict, Early Days Recalled, The Sultan of Turkey, Wasted Solar Heat, Notes of a Pilgrimage, The Spring Habits of British Quadrupeds, and The Cliff Dwellers of Colorado, with instalments of Marcia, A Waltz of Chopin and The Empty Compartment, and poetry. For fifty-two numbers of sixty-four large pages each (or more than 3,300 pages a year) the subscription price ($8) is low.

The August number of THE ARENA exhibits the characteristic boldness and fearlessness that has made the great review so popular in the short space of nine months. Steady ability, coupled with absolute freedom in the discussion of all great problems, is something novel in magazine literature; yet this has been a leading characteristic of THE ARENA since its incorporation.

The present issue contains a remarkable interesting paper from Prof. N. S. Shaler of Harvard University, on The Economic Future of the New South, in which the learned scientist, notices at length the wonderful resources of the South, her natural advantages in soil, climate, and great mineral resources. This is followed by number of able papers among which may be mentioned Our Foreign Immigration, Hypnotism, etc., Domestic Infelicity of Literary Women, A Day In Court, An Inspired Advocate (Rufus Choate), The Shadow of the Noose, etc.

Electric Street Railroads. The Lynn & Boston Railroad company has petitioned for the electric system in Lynn. The company, with its usual energy, is pushing the electric system in every direction, and the time is not far distant when the system will prevail on all the Lynn & Boston roads.

Mr. Breed, President and principal owner of the Lynn & Boston, is President and principal owner of the North Woburn and of the East Middlesex lines, which means that the day is close at hand when the cars of both these roads will be run by electricity. Mr. Breed is rich, progressive and prompt to adopt modern improvements, therefore it is safe to conclude that electricity will be the moving power on both of these roads, and, probably, the next year or so. It would add very materially to the passenger receipts of both corporations to change horseless for horseless.

Typhoid fever often gets into a community and has a "run." Science says it is born within the human system, and that when the germ reaches the open air, perhaps through the pores of the skin, its touch is contamination. It is then very essential that clothing should be thoroughly washed, and this can best be done with Brussels soap, and then all typhoid and other germs become inert.

THE PRODIGAL SON.

LESSON V, THIRD QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, AUG. 3.

Text of the Lesson, Luke xv, 11-34—Commentary by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

[Compiled from Lesson Helper Quarterly by permission of H. S. Hoffman, publisher, Philadelphia.]

11. "And he said, A certain man had two sons." This is the beginning of the third section of this parable, which is a continuation of the lesson of last week. The whole parable teaches the great love of God, the Father, Son and Holy Spirit, for lost and helpless, and erring humanity; and the sympathy of the angels with God in His joy over the salvation of the lost.

12. "And the younger of them said to his father, Father, give me the portion of goods that fall to me." Then he divided unto them his living. The son in sin is the son of the father and his love. The desire also for independence of the father and separation from him indicates the ingratitude of his heart and his insensibility to the father's love and care.

13. "And not many days after, the younger son gathered all together, and took his journey into a far country, and there wasted his substance with riotous living." The first illustration of this rebellious nature in man is seen in Cain, who would not submit to the kind requirements of a loving God, but preferring his own way "went out from the presence of the Lord." Gen. iv, 8, 16. He pleased. It is seen in Esau, who preferred a mess of pottage to his God-given birthright (Gen. xxv, 32-34).

14. "And when he had spent all, there came a mighty famine in that land; and he began to be in want." When we turn away from God, who is the source of all life, and seek to satisfy ourselves with aught else, even with the gifts of God, we are hewing out cisterns, broken cisterns, that can hold no water (Isa. xlvi, 10), and sooner or later we shall surely come to want.

15. "And he went and joined himself to a citizen of that country; and he sent him into his fields to feed swine." The far country into which he went from his own father's house and plenty is all about us. It is this present evil world which, like the swine, is unclean (Gal. i, 4; I John v, 19), and which allures us away from God. All who are unclean are said to be "swine." The swine is a filthy and unclean animal, and is compared to dogs and swine (Eph. i, 13; II Pet. ii, 22).

16. "And he would fain have filled his belly with the husks that the swine did eat, and no man gave unto him." First want then worldly pleasures, and now a beastly appetite.

17. "And when he came to himself, he said, How many hired servants of my father's have bread enough and to spare, and I perish with hunger." He had been so full of self and self seeking that the Father's house had not been much in his thoughts, except perhaps as the recollection of a restraint which he could not submit to. But by having his desires granted he has been led to see something of the leanness of his soul (Isa. cv, 15). We read in I Cor. v, 6, of one being delivered unto Satan for the destruction of the flesh, that the spirit may be saved in the day of the Lord Jesus. And in Job xxxiii, 15-20, we read of dreams, sickness and afflictions as means used by God with men to bring back their souls from the pit, to be enlightened by the light of the Lord.

18. "I will arise and go to my father, and will say unto him, Father, I have sinned against heaven and before thee, and am no longer worthy to be called thy son. I beseech thee, send me to my father." In the story of the lost sheep, the lost piece of money we saw the seeking shepherd and woman with the light. The sheep and the money had nothing, but the shepherd and the woman did all. But here is a responsible human being who has gone astray like a lost sheep, and has been as irresponsible to his father's love as a piece of metal.

19. "And when he was yet a great way off, his father saw him, and had compassion, and ran, and fell on his neck, and kissed him." This is the love of God which said to one poor sinner, "Thy sins are forgiven; thy faith hath saved thee; go in peace." And to another, "Neither do I condemn thee; go and sin no more," and which says to all, "Him that cometh unto me I will in no wise cast out" (John vi, 37; I John vi, 37). If we confess our sins He is faithful and just to forgive us our sins and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness (I John i, 9).

20. "And he arose and came to his father." All his conviction, and sense of unworthiness, and good resolutions, would have gone for nothing had he failed to take this step. He might have remained in the far country, and did there fall of conviction and good resolutions. But here is the saving point, "Hearose and came." And now we shall see the result.

21. "But when he was yet a great way off, his father saw him, and had compassion, and ran, and fell on his neck, and kissed him." This is the love of God which said to one poor sinner, "Thy sins are forgiven; thy faith hath saved thee; go in peace." And to another, "Neither do I condemn thee; go and sin no more," and which says to all, "Him that cometh unto me I will in no wise cast out" (John vi, 37; I John vi, 37). If we confess our sins He is faithful and just to forgive us our sins and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness (I John i, 9).

22. "But the father said to his servants, Bring forth the best robe, and put it on him; and put a ring on his hand, and shoes on his feet. Think ye that I am able to do this? I say unto you, Nay, but he will do it, that he may show forth his love to the world." This is the love of God which said to one poor sinner, "Thy sins are forgiven; thy faith hath saved thee; go in peace." WHERE CLOCKS ARE IN NEW YORK.

Cognate Reasons Why Women Shopping in New York Do Not Carry Watches.

Many women who I know invariably leave their watches behind them when they go out shopping. I remonstrated with one of them the other day and got this answer and explanation: "I'm not in the habit of carrying a watch, which is a most inconvenient thing for a woman to carry, anyway. She must put it in her pocket, for she'd never find it when she wanted it; if she buttons it in the front of her waist it is more gettable, but it is inconvenient. No one wears a watch in her waistband, and a chain watch, or carrying your watch in a chain bag, is a temptation to a thief. So I leave my watch at home and trust to the public clocks."

"Of course I see my hall clock when I go out. Then there are several clocks on the Grand Central; there is a clock in every elevated station; there is the church clock at Twenty-ninth street and Fifth avenue; besides, there is the electric clock. The Fifth Avenue hotel clock every one knows, and there is a clock in Twenty-third street near Sixth avenue. Twenty's clock is in Union square, and there are several clocks in all the big shopping stores, generally near the elevators."

"There are a few clocks along the Bowery, and some along Sixth avenue, while down town there are plenty of them, the City Hall, the Tribune, Times clocks, the Produce Exchange clock, and quite a number of less prominent but equally good timekeepers. So really what is the use of my carrying a watch that is either in my way or out of my way, and in both cases useless?"

"And I hadn't a way to say,"—Julian Ralph in Chatting.

After Dinner. A lady who has become a member of a small club was horrified at receiving the announcement: "April 2, dinner at 6. Toasts. You will reply for the gentlemen."

"Toasts?" cried she. "Why, I know nothing about toasts except what I learned in the kitchen. Make an after dinner speech! I could as well compose a symphony!"

She is not alone in her timidity. Many an accomplished orator has owned to the stage fright connected with "saying a few words" after dinner. There are still those who take comfort in Thackeray's delightful prophecy that "a day will arrive when we shall have the speeches done by a skilled waiter at a side table, as we now have the carving."

Still, a man's nerve and ability can never be gauged by the amount of fright he exhibits when he is asked to get upon his feet. With many persons that one movement seems to break the ice of timidity, though even Mr. Lowell once assured an audience that "whenever he finds himself upon his legs he is tempted to yield to a natural impulse and take to his heels."

There are, however, those who find no difficulty in getting up, but seem to be totally unable to sit down again. The old advice in regard to the length of such speeches as they are likely to make is still the best which can be given them: "If you haven't struck oil in less than five minutes you'd better stop boring."—Youth's Companion.

Sutton Chase. It is a part of the religion of every epicure that dinner without cheese is like a beautiful maiden with only one eye. An Englishman of national reputation has said: "I do verily think that in 1828 a Stilton cheese was a better fellow than he is in 1888," and the man ought to know, for he has been a Stilton for almost three-quarters of a century. It has never been famous for anything but cheese. The Stilton that comes to this country is fairly good. It has been said that in the old days men put less milk in their cream and less water in their milk than at present, but it is only fair to admit that the crusty, brown old port that was taken with it made it seem better to those who ate it long ago. Stilton is the most expensive of the cheeses brought to this country, and the sale for it is found altogether in the eastern states. —New York Tribune.

One of Ruskin's Jokes. I met a very charming English girl who told me a most characteristic tale of John Ruskin. One of the classes at Girton had just completed Ruskin's "Stones of Venice," and to show their appreciation of the author's work wrote him a "round robin" thanking him for the pleasure this book had given them. In a short time each signer of the letter received a note from Mr. Ruskin telling her that her writing was a disgraceful exhibition of girlish ignorance, and that she must write three verses from the Bible every day a month and then send her manuscript to him. And the joke of it all, my young friend went on, was that the girls were so close enough to do it. —New York Star.

The use of the electro-magnet for illustrating the presence of submerged torpedoes or lost anchors has been suggested. The magnet in connection with a delicate strain dynamometer is lowered into the water and excited by battery. The metal will attract the torpedo or anchor, and the dynamometer will reveal the fact.

Happy Housewives. And 100 men to call on any druggist for a free trial package of Lane's Family Medicine, the great root and herb remedy, discovered by Dr. S. B. Lane while in the Rocky Mountains. For diseases of the Blood, Liver and Kidneys it is a positive cure. For constipation and clearing up the complexion it does wonders. It is the best spring medicine known. Large size package, 50 cents. At all druggists.

"Oh, mother, mother," yelled a little darkey as he saw the militia on the way to camp to-day, "what's them soldiers?" "Soldiers, child?" exclaimed his mother; "what you talkin' bout?" "Dem ain't soldiers; dem's de District malaria!"

Be Your Own Doctor. It won't cost you one half as much. Do not delay. Send three 2-cent stamps for postage, and we will send you Dr. Kaufmann's great work, five colored plates from nature by Dr. J. E. Kaufmann. The plates show the digestive organs, the best remedy for which is one of Ayer's Pills, to be taken after dinner.

That distention of the stomach which many people feel after eating, may be due to improper mastication of the food; but in most cases, it indicates a weakness of the digestive organs, the best remedy for which is one of Ayer's Pills, to be taken after dinner.

FUN OPENING SAGES.

Some Incidents Showing How Troubles Arise from Little Causes.

"There are many amusing incidents connected with our business," said a safe manufacturer one day to a Boston reporter. "It is to be expected that in the ordinary course of events circumstances will arise when a safe will have to be opened by an expert. Looks like any other piece of mechanism, is a barometer. The best of them are liable to fall at times through some slight defect in manufacturing, same as the misapprehension of the most valuable watch may get out unexpectedly."

"Not long ago a firm wanted a man to fix their safe. It was open, but they could not shut the door fast enough, to throw the bolts. The man went to the place and after a brief examination saw a penny resting on one of the bottom flanges. Taking this off the door shut and locked all right. I forgot how much it cost the firm to have the man go to their place and pick up the little coin, but it was enough to prevent it being repeated, no doubt. A similar case happened recently. We were sent for at about the close of business hours to see what was the trouble with one of our safes. The bolts would not throw far enough to turn the lock. The result was the finding of a cloth button from a lady's dress in the lower bolt hole."

"Some years ago we had delivered a new set of vault doors for a bank about two hundred miles away. Just before we were ready to occupy their new quarters we had a telegram to send a man at once. The bolts of the door would not throw far enough to lock it. Our man went, and this is what he found: The bank officers had fitted in a board for the tread of the vestibule, but had omitted to bore holes in it for the bolts. The result was that after ten minutes' labor made everything all right, but made that piece of board a rather extravagant luxury."

"Episcure like, we have reserved the best for the last. For fear that this may reach the eyes of the reader, the incident I will substitute for his correct address that of Calais, Me. It was not a thousand miles from there. The letter read to come at once and open a safe, as there were important documents wanted for immediate use. With his kit of tools the expert went next train and arrived on the following evening. It proved to be an old fashioned safe with a large key lock. There, said the man, is the safe. The lock has been working harder and harder for weeks, until now I am looking for it. I am not sure, but I think it is the best work I have ever done. I opened. Never mind the damage if you will only break it in it short order."

"Our expert took the key and tried it, but it refused to work. He then took a small wire and picked out half a handful of dirt and dust from the key, tried it again and a better working lock was never seen. How much is your bill? As this involved a trip and from Calais of about 600 miles, and time and expense in proportion, he replied $40. Taking a roll of bills from his pocket he said: 'That is satisfactory on conditions. Does any one in the place know your business here?' The reply was, 'No one.' 'All right, then,' got out by the next train and keep mum, for I would gladly pay $100 rather than have any of my friends know that I was fool enough to go to Boston for a man to pick the dirt out of my key.'—Boston Courier.

A Phantom Postman. For weeks a remarkable phantom illusion has attracted attention at Parkersburg, W. Va. On dark nights the figure of a phantom postman has been seen clearly outlined on one of the windows of the city postoffice. The form and features of the phantom are as distinct as life. It appears to be an act of distributing mail. The apparition has been seen only when no one was in the building, and it cannot be accounted for. Hundreds have seen it, and among the superstitious it has created alarm. It reads the postal cards. —Exchange.

Where "Counterpane" Comes From. Counterpane is a corruption of counterpoint, from the Latin contra, (in a wadded wrapper, a quilt). When the stitches were arranged in patterns it was called contra, puncta, which in French became counterpoint, corrupted into contre point, counterpoint where point is pronounced "poin" corrupted into "pane."—Dry Goods Chronicle.

Bound to Win. Boston Girl—Papa, Mr. Toney is coming here to-night to press his suit with you. Boston Girl—Does the young man appreciate what an alliance with our house means? Boston Girl—Yes, papa, but Albert says he is bound to have me at any price. —New York Ledger.

Spectacles in Art. The earliest picture I know of is one by Domenico, in which St. Bartholomew, (ecclesiastical B. M. V. adducit) Jubet; ecclesiastical Domenico Monachi ejus discipulus fuit. The saint stands in the center of the picture examining a plan through a pair of pince-nez. —Notes and Queries.

The Widow's Mile.

An aged, and the country was only one trinket, a much worn German half penny, at his watch chain. One day his grandson asked the reason of its presence in the place of honor, and the old general answered by telling a little romance. Baron Malotie, the grandson, narrates the story in his book, "Twixt Old Times and New."

The grandfather was so severely wounded at Leipzig in 1812 that he was picked up for dead and thrown with thirty or forty corpses in a common grave. His servant having promised the officer's father to bring his son alive or dead, searched for his master's body and found him still alive. A strong constitution and the servant's nursing allowed the officer to be removed at the end of ten days.

His father's house was a long distance from Leipzig, and the country was overrun by French patrols and marauders. The journey home was begun at night in a peasant's cart drawn by an old horse. Cross roads were taken, and during the day they rested at some farmhouse.

On reaching after traveling all night they reached a small village and stopped in front of a baker's shop. The servant went in to buy bread, leaving his master stretched on a bed of straw and rags covered with a mantle and wearing a soldier's old cap on his head. There was nothing to betray his rank, but on the contrary he seemed a poor wounded private.

A poor woman in a tattered black gown, with a child in her arms, looked in the baker's window. Suddenly she saw the soldier, and, filled with pity, she opened the door and, taking the soldier by the hand, she led him into her room. She pressed the coin into the soldier's hand, and hurried off without saying a word. She had sacrificed her own and her child's breakfast that she might relieve the soldier's need she thought greater than her own.

At this moment the servant appeared, and by his master's order ran after the poor woman. Overtaking her he dropped a gold piece in her hand as a gift from the wounded soldier, who from that day wore the widow's mile at his chain.

The Hands. One of the most common signs of want of breeding is a sort of uncomfortable consciousness of the hands, and an obvious ignorance of what to do with them and a painful awkwardness in their adjustment. The hands of a gentleman seem perfectly at home without being cramped. They are habituated to elegant repose, or if they spontaneously move, it is attractively. Some of Queen Elizabeth's courtiers made playing with their sword hilt an accomplished, and the most efficient weapon of the Spanish conquistador is her fan. Strength in the fingers is a sure token of mental aptitude. Whittier burns his hand off before the eyes of his captor he gave the most indubitable proof we can imagine of fortitude, and it was natural that amid the ferocious bravery of feudal times a bloody hand in the center of an escutcheon should become the badge of a baronet of England. —New York Ledger.

Syndicates at Home and Abroad. We are informed that in Europe Germany has taken the lead as the country of syndicates in 1889. Ninety-two were formed there in that year, including an auction "ring" and a warblers "ring."

In Austria there were thirty-eight syndicates; in Great Britain, thirty-one; in France, six; in Russia, seven; in Belgium, eight; in Italy, two; in Sweden, four; and in Denmark, one. In addition to these there were eleven international trusts dealing with copper, zinc, nitrates, rails, mirror glass, sugar, dynamite and hotels. In America fifty-eight syndicates were formed, several of which were of English origin. It is known that about 250 of these trusts were formed during 1889, and it is probable that an equal number existed in them. The majority of the syndicates appear to have been genuine industrial and commercial undertakings. —Stock Exchange.

Combination Life Preserver. The idea of combining various uses in a single article is a favorite one with inventors. "The combined cap, pillow and life preserver" is to be made of some air tight material. As a cap looks like the double visored headgear which is considered the thing for steamers. The center pulls out. What appears to be a ventilator in the top proves to be a mouthpiece. You blow into it until the interior is about half filled with air, and you have a very fair imitation of the air pillow. If you awake at night and find that the boat is sinking you blow some more air in through the mouthpiece and have a life preserver as big as a good sized bladder. There is even a piece of tape attached for tying the preserver to the breast. —Cor. St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Wood Pulp Blotters. Ordinary blotting paper is too compact to absorb ink readily. The wood pulp from which fine white writing paper is manufactured is the best of blotting material. In fact, where a pulp mill is accessible writers can easily obtain sheets of it. —Cor. Author and Writer.

Parts of Speech. "Now, Johnny, you know what a noun is, do you?" "Yeth, um." "What is Jerusalem?" "An speculation, numm."—Harper's Bazar.

What is a cold in the head? Medical authorities say it is due to uneven clothing of the body, rapid cooling when in a perspiration, etc. The important point is, that cold in the head is an inflammation of the lining membrane of the nose, which, when unchecked, is certain to produce a catarrhal condition for catarrh is essentially a "cold" which nature is no longer able to "resolve" or throw off. Ely's Cream Balm has proved its superiority, and sufferers should resort to it before that common ailment becomes seated and ends in obstinate catarrh.

Nineteen years ago a Grafton county (Mich.) farmer refused to let his daughter go to a candy pull. She went, though, and remained away last week she drove up to her father's door, lifted out her eleven children, coolly took off her wraps, and astonished her father by declaring that she had concluded to return and stay home, and hereafter to be an obedient daughter.

Do you take many periodicals? asked a young minister on his first visit to one of his parishioners. "Oh, no, sir," replied the good woman. "I never do, but I'm sorry to say that my husband takes a periodical about once in every two months. I wish you could induce him to sign the pledge."

It is estimated that the factories of New England will make over $125,000,000 worth of footwear this year.

Amazing Cures Every Day

OF Blood Diseases are made by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. People try other remedies, without avail; but when they test the merits of this medicine, they speedily find relief.

"Last May a large carbuncle broke out on my arm. The usual remedies had no effect and I was confined to my bed for eight weeks. I had no appetite, and my flesh, strength, and vitality wasted away, so that my condition became quite alarming. A friend induced me to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Less than three bottles healed the sore and removed all its debilitating effects. In all my experience with medicine, I never saw more."

Wonderful results. Another marked effect of the use of this medicine was the strengthening of my eyesight, which, on recovering from my sickness, I found much stronger and keener than before. —Mrs. Carrie Adams, Holly Springs, Texas.

"It is my belief that for diseases of the skin there is no remedy equal to Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I have witnessed cases of eczema, erysipelas, pruritis, and salt-rheum effected by this great medicine."—Thomas G. Edwards, M. D., Chicago, Ill.

As I have great faith in the virtues of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, two bottles completely cured a child, and a third case had baffled all the local physicians. It is a great remedy."—O. B. Anderson, Champaign, Mo.

We speak knowledge, and refer our readers to Mr. Ulrich, of Berger, Mo., who, after suffering with rheumatism for years, was entirely cured by the use of this medicine."—Dana, Hermann, Mo.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla, made by Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.

Blindness cause constant constraint, because the horse's eyes, being on the side of his head, they compel him to look ahead, which is just as much as to look sideways. They also act as reflectors and throw the sun's glare into the animal's sensitive eyes. But care should be used in taking them of horses accustomed to them. Never put a frosty bit into a horse's mouth when the temperature is below the freezing point. It inflicts acute pain, and after permanent injury to the animal. A leather or rubber bit should be provided for such weather, or else a leather covering as smooth as possible should be put on the metal bit. A real mouthpiece can be made by any harnessmaker at a small cost. —New York Times.

The steno-telegraph, with which people are now experimenting in France, is creating much excitement among news gatherers. By its shorthand reports can be transmitted to any distance, just as they come from the desk of the stenographer. The invention also effects a rate of telegraphic speed, either in long or short-hand, never obtainable before. In an hour for instance, by means of it, 25,000 stenographic words were transmitted from Paris to Brussels, 18,000 words to Lyons and 15,000 to Marseilles. Stenographic words can be sent at the rate of 200 words per minute. Ordinary words, 100 or 120. Further experiments are expected to give still more astonishing results.

The Chicago News has this item: "A peculiar display of atmospheric effects upon a lifeless human body was witnessed six miles south of Quincy yesterday. A farm hand disappeared from the farm of Mr. Boreke. He was not seen again till this morning, when his body was found in a cornfield half a mile away from the house, where it had lain for more than three weeks. Instead of being decomposed it was dried up like a mummy. The skin was stretched tightly over the bones and was dry and hard. Physicians are unable to explain the phenomenon."

The Shah of Persia has granted an English company control of the Straits of Ormuz, which connect the Persian Gulf with the Arabian Sea. This virtually gives England control of the rate of the movement of the forward movements of Russia. England now controls the Straits of Gibraltar, the Suez Canal, the Straits of Ormuz, the harbor of Hong Kong, the Barmudas and numerous other points that give an immense advantage over any other nation in the world.

The peculiar enervating effect of summer weather is driven off by Ayer's Sarsaparilla, which "makes the weak strong."

FOR STATE SENATOR.

We are not surprised to hear that the political part has already begun to boil. People are commencing to talk. The various political conventions will be putting in an appearance at an early day.

In connection with the Republican nomination for State Senator from this District the name of only one person has struck our ear, and that was Edward F. Johnson, present Mayor of this city. It is understood that Mr. Johnson will not consent to run for a third term of the Mayoralty and his friends think strongly of presenting his name in the Senatorial convention, if he will allow it.

It is probable that several other gentlemen in the District will be urged for the nomination between this and the date of the convention.

There is a plenty of good Senatorial timber in the District.

THE G. A. R. ENCAMPMENT.

Last Tuesday the Boston Herald published a careful estimate, based on the most reliable data that could be obtained, on the number of Veterans that would attend the National G. A. R. Encampment in Boston next week, and the number of strangers outside the G. A. R. ranks who would visit the city on business and pleasure at that time. The former it places at 50,000, and the latter at 250,000. These figures represent the lowest estimates made not only by the Herald but by intelligent people placed in positions which afforded them uncommonly good opportunities to get facts on the subject.

According to these calculations Boston will be tremendously full of people next week.

THE PRESIDENT COMING.

If nothing turns up to alter his plans President Harrison will attend the National G. A. R. Encampment in Boston next week.

A reply to the Committee's invitation was received from him last week in which the above announcement was authorized.

The presence of the President of the United States will have a strong tendency to greatly increase the crowd at the Encampment.

KEMMLER EXECUTED.

Kemmler, the murderer who has been waiting for his earthly exit so long, was executed by means of electricity at the Auburn, New York, State Prison, early last Wednesday morning, in the presence of several doctors and others.

It took two or three shocks to kill him. After the first he was pronounced dead but was brought back to life again. It is believed there will be no more legal executions by electricity.

DELEGATES TO THE STATE CONVENTION.

According to the new apportionment the Republicans of Woburn will be entitled to 8 delegates in the State Convention.

Ward 4 will have 2 delegates and each of the other 6 Wards will have one.

The Convention will be held on Sept. 17.

MIGHT AS WELL GO FISHING.

Now that Gen. Banks isn't going on the retired list of the army, ambitious 5th district Republicans might as well go fishing.—Boston Herald.

There's about where it lights. If General Banks fails to get on the retired list he will be a candidate for re-election, and if he is a candidate for re-election he'll distance all competitors "as sure as shootin'."

THE WOBURN JOURNAL is tickled almost to death because the taxes over there this year are to be only $16.50 on a $1000, and puts the figures in bold face type. Perhaps Editor Hobbs can save enough on his taxes to pay his passage to Nahant on the occasion of Congressman Lodge's reception to the S. P. Association. Hope to see you there, Bro. Hobbs.—Reading Chronicle.

What a sprightly old chap our neighbor of the Chronicle is getting to be! As a member of the ever-so-esteemed S. P. A. he is first at the banquet and the last to leave it, indulges in oratory, throws off a bumper, shakes a hoof at the head of the quadrille, and "goes home with the girls in the mornin'" as gay and lively as a lad one-third of his age, and don't mind it a bit.

But then, Woburn beats Reading all to pieces on increase of population and decrease in rate of taxation.

WE are in receipt of the speech of Congressman Henry Cabot Lodge delivered in the House of Representatives at Washington on June 26, last, on a bill pending (called by the Bourbons "Lodge's Force Bill") to provide National Supervision of National Elections, which, on careful perusal, we find to be a fair, dispassionate discussion of an important National question. Mr. Lodge expresses statements like views of the functions of the Federal Government, its rights and liabilities, and these views are laid down with clearness, calmness, and without any bifurcated whatsoever. In other words it is a clear, strong statement of correct ideas concerning the subject discussed.

By courtesy of Hon. Charles R. Ladd, the present and prospective head accountant of the Auditor General, we are indebted for a copy of the annual report of that Department of the State government, for which we return thanks.

Mr. Blake will probably fetch up on the banks of the Sandy river before he gets back to Woburn.

—Miss Bessie B. Grammer, daughter of Mr. Samuel G. Grammer, is expected to arrive in this city in less than a week. She will come on the California G. A. R. excursion train but will not return. She went away about 20 months ago and during nearly all the time has been at Omaha, Neb., which city she likes very much. She has enjoyed good health during her prolonged absence, and also enjoyed life first-rate. A great many friends will extend to Miss Grammer a warm welcome back to her home.

—Woburn's City Council has directed that all city offices be closed August 12, in recognition of the G. A. R. Encampment. Mr. C. Colgate and David F. Moreland.—Boston Globe, Aug. 1.

—The above occasion was one of the happiest that has ever taken place in the city of G. A. R. It was briefly alluded to in the last issue of the JOURNAL, but as there was not sufficient time to hand to give a better account of it the above from the Globe is appropriate.

—Following close on the heels of the above generous behavior on the part of the Honorary Members and the good that followed the presentation, came the following letter from a lady who, with her late husband, is held in pleasant remembrance by Post 33:

"My husband, your late comrade, always felt a great interest in the Grand Army of the Republic, and its members everywhere enlisted his sympathy. If he were living he would spare no efforts for the success of this great undertaking of the coming Encampment. For his sake, and my pleasure, I enclose this small sum of $5.00 to add to the contributions you have made to collect. I have not forgotten your great kindness and respect for him at the time of his death and burial, and I would like to do more than this, but as a little is better than nothing, I thought this little would be acceptable."

—With best wishes for pleasant gatherings through the week of the coming entertainment.

—Rev. Fr. Slattery of St. Charles church has returned to his post of duty in the best of health and spirits. During the last year he has passed through a series of severe attacks of illness and suffered a great deal; but he seems to have pulled clean through this time and has at last got firmly established health. He has a great many warm friends here who will hail his return with pleasure.

—Mr. W. P. Pierce of Olean, N. Y., formerly of Central Square, left here the morning of Old Orchard Beach where his family have been stopping for several weeks. He will remain on the coast—all along from Bar Harbor to Seaside—for a fortnight and then return to Olean, where he has a large tannery and is doing a handsome business at leather making. He moved about a year ago, and likes York State first-rate.

—George F. Hartshorne, C. E., made photographic pictures of many of the scenes of devastation and ruin left by the Lawrence tornado two weeks ago. He went up the next day and took along his lightning camera to get views and when he returned home he had a large number of them ready to be finished up. The destructive power of the tornado was well set forth by these pictures of Mr. Hartshorne's.

—At the monthly meeting of the Academy of New England held at the Crawford House, Boston, last week, Hon. B. E. Whittemore, of this city was elected Chairman of the Printing Committee for the Annual Banquet which is to be held on the 9th prox. in Boston, and his daughter, Miss G. M. Whittemore, was elected a member of the Ladies' Reception Committee.

—George W. Nichols, the watchmaker, went fishing last Saturday night. He and M. B. Field of the American Express Co. were taken down the harbor by Capt. W. W. Pratt in a steam yacht. They were gone a day or so, and claimed to have had extraordinary good luck—for them. No doubt of it. As usual the color of their catch was not seen by Woburnites on their return.

LONELINESS.
To be alone? It is not that which sends the sickening, hopeless ache, the stifled pain against my heart. But to know how vain it is to mourn! When dull depression broods with all the hourly dreads of every day. And turn the leaf, that erstwhile was sweet, to bitter sadness. Each thing is empty. With some meagre thoughts, and haunting moods, I prey. With sharp insistence on my mind. To this dreary room, when all life's light is gone. To miss the loved one, the dear creature. To hear the dead voice in the morning wind. To be with others, yet to know the one I need is gone, this is loneliness.

A MODEL MILL GIRL.
SKETCH OF THE CAREER OF LUCY LARCOM.
Side by side with our best-loved New England poets—Whittier, Longfellow, Lowell and Holmes—her name, hardly less a household word than theirs, is Lucy Larcom. Her poems are as truly the outgrowth and exponent of New England life as theirs, and they have as distinctive a flavor. What he has done for the farm and fisher's boat she has done for the loom and the needle. And in the years that followed, she shared, outwardly at least the life of the mill girls. Her life was one with theirs, indeed, else, she could not have glorified it as she did in her "Lydis of work." She became, of course, a contributor to the Offering.
At this time she met Whittier, then editing a Free-Soil journal in Lowell, and a friendship, enduring until now, strong, high, helpful, responsive, sprang up between them.
Mrs. Whitney says: "Afterward, when she had come to know and love the poet sister, the three were much together in such intercourse as is rarely enjoyed." And she adds: "It is the pride and thankfulness of Lucy Larcom's life to have so known and been indebted to Whittier."
It is to Elizabeth Whittier, who is known through the devoted love of her brother, again and again finding expression in tender allusions, and known too by the poems he has edited in "Hazel Blossoms," that Lucy Larcom dedicated her poems. And between the lines, as in the sentences themselves, one feels the influence that our poet must have felt, and the reverent love in which the memory lingers, still pulsing in the wisest verse.
When Miss Larcom was twenty she went with a married sister to Illinois, and remained there some years, at first teaching a district school, then studying and afterward teaching in a seminary. Then, coming home to Beverly, first teaching a class of young ladies, then, when the female seminary in Norton, Mass., conducting classes in rhetoric, English literature, and composition, history, mental and moral science and botany.
Then with teaching, and after a partial rest, she became assistant editor, and afterward the leading editor of our Young Folks. Since then, for a part of the time at least, she has lived sometimes with relatives and friends, and sometimes at Beverly by herself, her "dear home-corner of Massachusetts."
She seems to have been writing all along, from the time, when a child, she formed her little rhymes, and from the days of the Lowell Offering, and on through her Illinois life, till her songs came faster and freer in later years.
Her pen was swift and strong and loyal to speak for Boston and Massachusetts and for loyal Womanhood in war times. Her latest book since the "Wild Roses of Cape Ann" is a complete edition of her poems, issued in the Household series, by Houghton, Mifflin & Co., Boston. She has completed several volumes. "Breathings of the better life," "Roadside poems," "Hillside and seaside in poetry," and she has assisted Mr. Whittier in compiling three others: "Child-life in poetry," "Child-life in prose," and "Songs in three centuries."
She is the author of many a little song, full of heart-cheer and heavenly wisdom. She does not always get the credit of them for like other verses, they are often copied without mention of the author, so the reader misses the double pleasure of knowing that the song he loves was written by the poet he reveres. One such I found once in a newspaper, and learned long afterward its author. It seems to me beautifully characteristic of her, and is entitled "Shells," and begins:
"I sat on the morning grass—
"I sat on the mountain side—
The best that any mortal had."
It is an earnest, noble and womanly life, first of all, that the poems have grown out of. She knew well the lives of toiling women, at the spindle, in the household, in the schoolroom. She enters heartily into the life and loves of common ways and things.—Cottage Health.

Woman's Column.
Wyoming's Triumphant March.
At Cheyenne, Wyo., on Wednesday, July 23, the formal celebration of Wyoming's admission to Statehood was observed with imposing ceremonies. An immense parade, several miles long, consisting of the State militia, civic societies, trade displays, and the garri-son of United States troops from Fort Russell, marched through the principal streets to the new Capitol Building. The exercises consisted of the presentation to the State of a magnificent flag by the women of Wyoming. The presentation speech was by Theresa A. Jenkins, who reviewed the history of woman suffrage in the Territory, and predicted for the movement permanence and success in the future. The response was by Gov. Francis E. Warren. M. C. Brown, president of the constitutional convention which framed the constitution adopted by Wyoming, presented the women with a copy of the constitution. It was received by Amelia R. Post, Vice President of the National American Woman Suffrage Association. The orator of the day was C. D. Clark, of Evanston, Telegrams and letters of congratulation were received from the Governors of Montana and Nebraska, and from the leaders of the woman suffrage movement in the East.

Senator Teller has introduced a bill giving a pension of $2,000 a year to Mrs. Jessie Benton Fremont.
Mrs. Elizabeth W. Champney will contribute from abroad, to the next Harper's Bazar an article on "Country Life in England." The same issue will contain the second instalment of "Excursion for Women," by Emma Moffett Tye, the subjects being "Bicycles and Tricycles."

The address of Frances E. Willard on "The Sanctity of the Home and the White Cross Movement in Education," before the National Educational Association, was published in full in the St. Paul Pioneer Press, July 10. It occupies nearly six columns, and is worthy of thoughtful reading. It was an eloquent plea for the evolution of pure, noble manhood and womanhood.

The capacity of women for university studies received a striking illustration the other day at Magill College, Canada, where a group of lady students were carried off by lady students in the department of philosophy one of the ladies was placed first, while another stood second, being only a few marks lower. Morrill College, another Canadian seat of learning, has on its roll of B. A.'s a number of ladies, and the professors testify that the other sex. At Trinity University, Miss H. E. Gregory, the first lady student to gain that distinction at that institution.

The world moves for women even among the most benighted. The Vasa Nagar Banias, of India, have passed resolutions that a widow shall have her head shaved but once, after which she may allow her hair to grow and may also attend caste dinners. They have also resolved not to give their daughters in marriage before the age of ten, and two years have been fixed as the lowest limit for the consummation of a marriage. This is an improvement upon infant marriages to be consummated whenever the boy husband or his guardians chose, as well as upon the barbarous cruelties formerly practiced on widows.

A Sailor King.
George Wright, who arrived in San Francisco from the Caroline Islands, brings a queer story of the sudden rise of a sailor to distinction in the largest island of an archipelago seventy-five miles west of the Hawaii, where Mr. Wright has a trading store. "The sailor," said Mr. Wright, "is Carl Benjamin, and he has no less than nineteen wives and fifty odd copper-colored children. He was wrecked in the schooner Bonanza off the Line, a drone Islands, some years ago, and floated at sea on a raft for a couple of weeks before he struck land. If you will look at a map of the Pacific you will find lying midway between the tropic of Cancer and the equator, 600 miles west of the Marshall group, thirteen dots. On some maps they are marked Thirteen Islands, well inhabited. That is all there is to point out their significance. It is on the biggest of these, called by the sailor Benjamin Island, after himself, that he has taken up his home. It is about ten by twenty miles in extent. Well inhabited means that there is quite a sprinkling of dark-skinned natives there, as well as many more who have two and two and a half of them. They eat breadfruit, bananas, coconuts, and fish.

They don't work at all. Benjamin has got to be King. He has nothing at all to do but go swimming in the surf, talk the native gibberish, which he has learned, or roll under a palm tree. Samuel says he has wives fan him while he lazily smokes the Kucha leaf, which grows plentifully there, and which, after one becomes used to it, is fished better than tobacco. Benjamin is capable of doing some work there, however. He carried three or four books with him on the raft, the last thing that you would have expected, and he has contrived to teach the natives English. Benjamin is an American of German or Jewish descent, and is a lover of books. The first thing he did was to select an intelligent native and teach him the alphabet.

The fellow learned rapidly, and soon began to teach it to others, and a number of them can now speak English, while the rising generation immediately around are gradually picking up a knowledge of the language. Benjamin is looked upon as a sage. The chiefs of whom there are four, come to him for points, and of their own accord they have made him their ruler, the chiefs being a sort of Cabinet. Benjamin has picked out the handsomest women for wives, and they esteem it quite an honor. The King lives in the biggest bamboo house in the village of Kiri, a straggling aggregation of native houses on a coral reef. His children are of all ages, and are a sprightly, lively lot.

Nobody bothers much with clothes in the South Pacific, still Benjamin wears a little something, and is gradually prevailing on the natives to do so, too. He keeps telling them that there is no civilization without some clothes. Benjamin is about 30 years old. He was from Newburyport, Mass., but says that he has no desire to return to America. He is the only white man, with one exception, for hundreds of miles around. He has taken to wearing a string of shells around his neck like the natives, and he sometimes imitates them and puts dots of blue paint, got from a native shrub, on his face. The permanent population of his island is given at 600 or 700. The island is indented with beautiful bays, and is dotted with trees and shrubs of a tropical growth covered with all eight bottles of ers. Benjamin Island is about 600 miles west of the Marshall group."

Pronounced Hopeless, Yet Saved.
From letter written by Mrs. Ada E. Hard of Groton, S. D., we quote: "Was taken with a bad cold, which settled on my lungs, coughed and in finally turning into Consumption. Four doctors gave me up saying I could live but a short time. I gave myself up to my Saviour, determined I could not stay with my friends on earth, I would meet my absent ones above. My husband was advised to get Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. I gave it a trial, took all eight bottles, it has cured me and thank God I am now a well and healthy woman. Trial bottles free at H. L. Flanders, Co's Drugstore, regular size, 50c, and $1.00."

Newspapers and Magazines.
Where the newspaper offers to the young writer an advantage over the magazine is in its wider field and its larger capacity. Publishing thirty times against the single issue of a magazine, the newspaper naturally absorbs more material and a writer's chances correspondingly better. Then, too, subjects which are out of the range of the magazine fall directly within the scope of the newspaper. This is especially true of timely articles. The magazines of today with their large circulations, and the necessary slower process of printing, are prepared so far in advance as to make it impossible for them to get close enough to timely happenings to make their discussion of them fresh and interesting. With the newspaper this is, of course, different, and it is precisely in its ability to treat of what is latest and freshest wherein lies its strength, and in these respects the field is necessarily broadened to the writer.

But, bear in mind, this advantage is only one of greater capacity, not of less requirement. Disappointment can be no more certain than when a manuscript is sent to a newspaper editor with the belief that he is less critical, or that his constituency is less exacting than is the case of the monthly magazine.

Marvelous Endurance.
The vast amount of labor performed by the heart in keeping all portions of the body supplied with blood is not generally known. It beats 100,000 times, and forces the blood at the rate of 168 miles a day, which is 3,000,000,000 times and 5,150,880 miles in a life time. No wonder, then, are some heart failures. When exercising, pain in the side or stomach, fluttering, choking in throat, oppression, then follow, weak, hungry or smothering spells, swollen ankles, etc., Dr. Franklin Miles' New Heart Cure is a truly reliable remedy. Sold by Charles H. Burt.

The London Times had a good correspondent in Buenos Ayres. He was in the midst of the street fighting, and sent off a dispatch amid a shower of bullets. Both he and his journal are strong partisans of the revolution. The Times says that Argentine securities might rise if President Celman would resign.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla, by purifying and enriching the blood, improves the appetite, aids the assimilative process, strengthens the nerves, and invigorates the system. It is, therefore, the best and most thoroughly reliable alternative that can be found for old and young.

The tower of the Philadelphia City Hall is now 335 feet high, yet on top of that 8000 tons of iron and bronze are to be placed. There is to be a clock tower, the dials of which are to 27 feet in diameter, surmounted by a statue of William Penn 37 feet high, and there will be numerous statues.

If the trouble in Guatemala continues long, efforts will be made to raise the price of coffee on the Pacific coast. Seven-eighths of the coffee used in California, Canada, from Central America, and Guatemala produces fully one-half of this. If the war is not speedily over this season's crop will be a failure.

INCREASE OF VALUATION.

The statistics furnished the JOURNAL last week by the City Assessors were full of encouragement. The net gain in taxable property during the year ending April 30, 1890, was $225,843. The gain in real estate, which is the best index to the condition of a town or city that can be found, was $330,529. To partially offset these figures was a loss of $104,636 on personal property, leaving the very handsome net gain above stated.

As remarked, the increase in net real estate where it will always be in a prosperous community, but the Assessors' footings would also have shown a gratifying state of things as to personal property returns for taxation but for some temporary suspensions of active operations among the chief industries, tanning and currying leather.

One of these preventatives of an increased personal property exhibit was the suspension of leather making by Mr. James Skinner, surviving partner of the late firm of James Skinner & Co., for the purpose of settling up the partnership affairs. This is one of the largest and most prosperous leather establishments in this city and its temporary withdrawal from the manufacturing, and having no stock or leather on hand on the 1st of May, produced considerable of a deficit in the returns of personal property for purposes of taxation. The factory is to be re-opened and set in motion at once by Mr. James Skinner who, it is understood, has bought the interest of Mr. John True, his former partner, in the business.

Another large establishment, that of Messrs. Bryant & King, whose product is calfskins, has been doing next to nothing during the last year owing to a continuously unfavorable market for their goods. Up to within a year or two the Assessors usually got handsome returns from this firm.

The factory of Eastman Cummings & Co. has not been employed to its full capacity for a year past and a loss has been here sustained to the city's personal property assessments.

Other concerns of less magnitude have helped to swell the deficit but they will all resume business under a full head of steam very soon and the public finances will be all the more prosperous for it.

But the valuation figures of the Assessors make a first-rate showing for Woburn, and when is added to them an increase of polls, increase of dwellings erected, a big increase of population, and a material reduction in the rate of taxation, all must admit that the future looks bright for our young and go-ahead city.

MORE CANDIDATES.

The rumor is current that Charles F. Spear, Esq., one of Woburn's bright young lawyers, who was a prominent candidate for the Republican nomination for Senator from this District last year, will try it again this fall with prospects brightened rather than dimmed by the lapse of time. He has many influential friends who will put in good work for him if he is in the race, or should conclude to enter it, and any opponents which might see fit to stand out against his nomination would have something more than boys' play to prevent it.

It is reported that a strong force of local Republican leaders are putting in good and effective work in behalf of the nomination of Capt. Ed. F. Wyer for the same position. It has been acknowledged for years that the captain is a power in politics (and not without good reason), and it is the feeling of his numerous personal friends that the party owes him a debt which ought to be paid. Besides having always been a hard, unselfish laborer for the welfare of the Republican organization, he has ever been loyal to its ticket and platform, and zealous for the advancement of its interests. He never sought office at the hands of his party and there is no certainty that he would accept one if tendered to him; but his friends think his services in years past are worthy of substantial recognition and are preparing to present his name at the Senatorial convention, provided the Captain's consent to it can be obtained.

We understand that both parties will insist that the nomination shall come to Woburn—the Republicans will at any rate. Fair play would seem to demand that this end of the District be accorded the privilege of naming the Senator this year. And it probably will be.

In connection with the subject it is proper to remark that the Democrats not only expect to renominate Mr. James Skinner but that they expect to elect him. He came within a very few votes of it last fall and his supporters pretend to believe that a fair amount of good, practical work will insure his triumphant success at the polls next November.

It is probable that other names, in due time, will be brought forward by both parties for support, and the contest for the Senatorship is likely to be quite a spirited one.

THE G. A. R. ENCAMPMENT.

Tuesday was a great day in Boston. There were more people in the city than ever before on any public occasion.

Nearly 40,000 Veterans were in the grand parade, representing 43 States, and more than 250,000 strangers viewed the procession.

The parade started at 11.30 from Commonwealth Avenue and was nearly six hours in passing.

President Harrison headed the procession. Hundreds of distinguished people in military and civil life were present to witness the magnificent scene.

The North Atlantic fleet was in the harbor and attracted the attention of thousands.

Veterans were present from Honolulu,

Alaska, and other remote sections of this great country.

The weather was all that could have been desired.

Boston and the handsome thing by the 40,000 G. A. R. men present, and although the city on Tuesday was packed like herrings in a box there were no accidents.

All the railroads centering at the Hub were taxed to their utmost capacity, and all trains were behind time. The city was magnificently decorated. The State House was resplendent in artistically arranged bunting. All public and hundreds of private buildings were gloriously arrayed.

The floral G. A. R. emblems in the Public Garden and the floral arches, all designed by Forester Doune, were brilliant and beautiful.

Everything passed off in splendid shape and everybody appeared to be perfectly satisfied with the grand affair and Boston's reception of the Vets.

THE ORIGINAL PACKAGE BILL.

Last Friday the conference committee agreed to report back to the House the Senate Original Package Bill instead of the one passed by the House, which insures the immediate success of the much needed measure. The following is the Senate bill, the one which the House conference agreed to, and the one, when enacted, that will settle Original Package rumssellers for good and all:

"That all fermented, distilled or other intoxicating liquors or liquids transported into any State or Territory, or remaining therein for use, consumption, sale or storage therein, shall, upon arrival in such State or Territory, be subject to the operation and effect of the laws of such State and Territory, enacted in the exercise of its police powers, to the same extent and in the same manner as though such liquors or liquids had been produced in said State or Territory, and shall not be exempt therefrom by reason of being imported therein in original packages or otherwise."

THE ATTORNEY GENERAL.

Some months ago a report was circulated that Attorney General Waterman of this State proposed to withdraw. It was an idle rumor, without any foundation. Mr. Waterman has never intended to retire, but will remain a candidate. He will have a strong support from the Western part of the State, and is not without friends in all sections.

About this time last year nothing on earth could be more certain, according to the statements of a few loud mouthed people, than that Attorney General Waterman was a dead cock in the pit—a goner, so to speak. His renomination, they said, was simply out of the question.

We noticed that Attorney General Waterman "made the rifle" all the same. He got the nomination without opposition and distanced all competitors at the polls.

Attorney General Waterman is a sound lawyer, a straight-forward man, a loyal Republican, and the best thing the party can do is to keep him right where he is. They know it and are going to do it—one more year, at least.

The population of this (Middlesex) county, according to the census of 1890, is 427,642. In 1885 it was 357,311. In 1880 it was 317,830. Since 1885 it has increased 70,331, and since 1880 it has increased 109,810. It is the largest county in point of population in the State except Suffolk, and has only 45,960 less than it has. The population of the State is 2,104,586, of which Middlesex county contains nearly one-fifth. It will be seen that its increase of population was considerably larger from 1885 to 1890 than from 1880 to 1885.

We learn from the Chicago Evening Journal, that Adam Lieberknecht, Esq., of Henry county, Illinois, recently appointed Consul at Tampico, Mexico, and has only 45,960 less than it has. The population of the State is 2,104,586, of which Middlesex county contains nearly one-fifth. It will be seen that its increase of population was considerably larger from 1885 to 1890 than from 1880 to 1885.

There was not a thing lacking in the account of the grand G. A. R. parade which was given by the Boston Journal on Wednesday morning. It was a well written, well arranged, and minute story of the entire affair, and for the purpose of being kept for future use there is no account in any of the Boston papers that surpassed, and few that equaled it.

The Boston Evening Traveller issued a souvenir number last Monday afternoon which went away ahead of the other Boston papers so far as our observation extends. They all did well in the line of pictures, but the Traveller's production was the most artistic and elaborate of any. It was a good number to preserve.

President Harrison left Gov. Brackett and Staff escorted him to the N. Y. & N. E. R.R. station at 11.30, and just before 12 he slipped off and hardly anybody knew it.

Gov. Brackett represented Massachusetts in the opening of the G. A. R. Encampment last Tuesday in fine style. He proved himself an honor to the Executive Chair of the old Commonwealth.

No man of the whole immense crowd was greeted more enthusiastically or had more honorable attention bestowed on him than General B. F. Butler.

Our rustic poet turns on steam this week and gives the reader of the Journal a poetical treatise on berries and garden truck.

Forest Hooper is doing a good deal of the plumbing business in this city. He is a thorough workman and employs only skilled hands.

General Secretary Bailey of the Woburn Y. M. C. A. has declined a call to take charge of the Brockton Association as General Secretary.

Chief of Police McIntosh and wife have gone to Nova Scotia where it is the hope of the JOURNAL they may pass a very agreeable vacation visit.

Mr. J. P. Bailey, General Secretary of the Woburn Y. M. C. A., left for Asbury Grove yesterday morning where he and his family will remain two weeks.

Rev. Mr. Parker, of the Unitarian Church, and family have gone up to Vermont to finish their vacation. The parson took in the big G. A. R. parade last Tuesday.

— An election of Aldermen will be held in Ward 5, on Aug. 26, to fill the vacancy occasioned by the death of Ald. Golden. It is a Democratic Ward and candidates will be plenty.

— Everett Haynes, who has been absent from Woburn about 8 years, is visiting his family here. He is a resident of Chicago where he has been in business for the last 5 years.

— Col. John M. B. Reid of Greenville, Illinois, who was Colonel of the 130th Illinois Infantry Regiment, is staying with friends in this city. Woburn was years ago his home.

— In the course of two or three weeks our esteemed townspeople who are away on vacation joys intent will be coming back to their homes again. The season is drawing to a close.

— The National Band gave a very fine concert on the Common last Wednesday evening. It was one of their best and was listened to with great pleasure by a big crowd of people.

— A good many out of town G. A. R. men have been seen in this city since Monday. Some of them are here visiting friends as well as attending the National G. A. R. Encampment.

— Letter-carriers Ed. H. Callahan and J. F. Maguire and druggist Bernard Devlin will start to-morrow for Wolfboro', N. H., on Lake Winnepesaukee, where they will remain two weeks.

— The Veterans of the 39th Mass. Regt., will hold their annual reunion in this city on Sept. 17 with Co. K., formerly known as the Woburn National Rangers. A refreshing season is anticipated.

— The Board of Aldermen are entitled to much praise for their appropriation of $200 towards defraying the expenses of the reunion of the 39th Mass. Inf. Aug. 26, to be held in this city on Aug. 26.

— Lawyer Allen didn't parade quite as much as he expected to last Tuesday. Dr. Bartlett, his attending physician, couldn't get him over a severe attack of illness in season for the great march in Boston.

— A woman who was buried at Oley, Pa., last week, was so large that in order to get the casket in and out of the house it was necessary to remove a portion of several door frames. She weighed 425 pounds.

— We think Mr. Joseph Kelley for a copy of the Exeter (N. H.) News-Letter. Mr. Kelley has been a subscriber of that paper 55 years, and had the reading of it for three years previously—or since 1831.

— Mr. Joseph Johnson of Pleasant street, this city, carried the same old canteen to the Boston parade that he carried at the Battle of Bull Run in 1861. It attracted much attention and is a relic worth holding on to.

— Chief McIntosh and Officer McDermott swooped down on Hugh McCull's place, No. 18 Main street, last Saturday evening and secured a couple of barrels of the "stuff." McCull was arrested but his friends bailed him out.

— The color line is drawn in Nova Scotia restaurants. A colored clergyman of Halifax has sued the proprietor of the railroad restaurant at Amherst, N. S., for refusing to allow him to sit down at the same table with white folk.

— All the Woburn school houses had their flags floating in the breeze last Tuesday. So also had the Liberty pole on the Common, Municipal Building, and other places. It was a day for a hearty display of patriotism all round the board.

— Mr. Owen McCafferty, an old gentleman and paralytic, fell on Main street last Wednesday evening and had to be taken to his home in a wagon. He served faithfully in the War of the Rebellion and draws a pension for wounds received.

— When a fellow is sorter all pestered out from the hot weather the best thing he can do for his constitution and debilitated system is to take a bottle of Flanders Tonic. There is nothing like it to lull up the nerve centres and keep them up.

— A heavy rain accompanied with thunder and lightning was a welcome visitor here Sunday evening. The day had been, at times, sultry and uncomfortable, but the thunder storm cleared the atmosphere out finely and cooler weather followed it.

— Some of the Comrades entertained at Post 161 last Tuesday evening were: William R. Fowle of Chelmsford, John M. Waldron and L. W. McAllister of Newbury, Vt., H. E. Reutree of Bradford, Vt., and Robert Ward of Reno Post, 4, N. Y.

— The Woburn G. A. R. are well satisfied with the election of Wheelock G. Veazey of Vermont for Commander-in-Chief of the G. A. R. His election is an honor to New England as much as to the Green Mountain State for he was New England's candidate.

— Mr. S. R. Libby of Durham, Me., was here gallantly in the 20th Maine, and there detailed into the Signal Service, and served time in Libby, Andersonville and Belleisle Rebel prisons, and wife are visiting their friends, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Nason.

— Rev. H. C. Townley, who was pastor of the First Baptist Church of Woburn some 20 years ago, will preach in that church on next Sunday forenoon and evening. There are a plenty of his old friends and parishioners here who will be glad to meet, see and hear him.

— The Globe says of the Woburn Democrat that it is "practically a unit." We can't imagine what kind of a "unit" it could be that the Democratic party in this city are like. There was never in the world so much heart-burning and family quarreling among them as there is at the present time. The Mayoralty campaign will develop the biggest intestine war among them that was ever seen, or else "all signs fail in a drought," or "A unit? So's your grandman!"

— Last Sunday was a great day for the street cars on both roads. Hundreds went by the East Middlesex to the beaches and horses had a tough time of it all around. The regular travel on both routes has increased a great deal within the last twelve months.

— J. Henry McMahon, a graduate of the JOURNAL and a very likely young man, is visiting at his home in this city. His last "sit" was at Kansas City where he picked type in a leading daily for a long time—for him, and where he will settle himself after his vacation.

— Last week Auctioneer E. J. Gregory and family: Mrs. J. H. Conway, wife of the Doctor; Mary Moore; Miss Gregory, Misses Annie, Ella, Ellard and Winnie Larkin—all went to Salisbury Beach for their summer outing. They were anticipating great pleasure.

— The Weston Lumber Company, of which Mr. J. B. McDonald of this city is President, had one of their mills at Groverton burned on Aug. 5. They were fully insured or nearly so. Mr. McDonald's friends may not know this as the newspapers made out the loss to be $10,000.

— "Over ninety different patterns of Chamber Sets" is the latest announcement from Deane's Furniture Co., 48 Canal street, Boston. The number can scarcely be realized unless one visits these extensive warehouses, which contain the largest collection of miscellaneous furniture in this country.

— Mr. Thomas Eaton died at his home in Waltham last Monday. He was an old resident of that city. He was the father of Mr. John F. Eaton, formerly of Woburn and of Mr. T. B. Eaton who established the Waltham Tribune a few years ago, and is now the owner and Editor of a daily at Taunton.

— A building at Walnut Hill station filled with hay was burned last Tuesday afternoon. An alarm was rung in from box 42 and the firemen responded, but the building and contents were totally consumed. The former was owned by the B. & M. R.R. Co., and the latter by Charles P. Brown. No insurance.

— Among the Vets who have been in Woburn this week is A. B. Prince, a member of Farragut Post, 125, of Lincoln, Nebraska. He was a Commissioned Officer on the Gunboat Spic in the Charleston blockade.

— Wishing to see active service he was transferred to the U. S. Monitor Nahant. He is a brother of Mrs. J. T. Freeman of Salem street.

— Comrade Jacob M. Ellis is doing the handsome thing by Comrades from Vermont and other places at his hospitable residence on Salem street. No Veterans ever have to go begging when Mr. J. M. Ellis is around, and for those who fought to preserve this glorious old Union of ours he has the warmest kind of a place in his heart.

— William Monahan, who lived on Corn street in this city, in response to the advice of his sons doing business there, started for Titusville, Fla., last Monday when he was not far from 60. Adams fell between the cars and was so badly injured that he died while being taken to the hospital. Members of his family reside here.

— The JOURNAL Book and Job office is complete in all its appointments and has the reputation of turning out as fine work and as much of it as any printing establishment in Middlesex county. It is fully supplied with presses, all the latest styles of type, stock and men to use them, and gentlemen, your work is respectfully solicited.

— Mr. William S. Kellen of Sidney, Ohio, is visiting at the residence of Mrs. Josiah Leathe. He is a brother of Mrs. Leathe, and has not been here for over 30 years. Having served in the War of the Rebellion, he came on to attend the National G. A. R. Encampment in Boston this week and to visit relatives and former friends at the same time.

— Post 33 entertained in royal style at G. A. R. Hall quite a number of visiting Comrades from Minnesota, Vermont and other sections last evening. There was feasting, music, postprandial oratory and other exceedingly pleasant exercises which the Comrades from abroad enjoyed to the full. It was one of the pleasantest sennecs Post 33 have ever held.

— There is a fair prospect for lower railroad fares between No. Woburn and Boston. Supt. Sanborn saw the justice of the position of the petitioners at a glance, and an engagement at which they received from him was very gratifying. The change in Superintendent of the Southern Division of the Boston & Maine Railroad wasn't a bad thing for Woburn, by any means.

— No procession made a more attractive appearance than Burbank Post No. 33, of Woburn, and no one received more compliments. In their white trousers, blue frocks, natty canes, and officers with new swords, equipments and badges, they looked as neat as a pin and so conspicuous a mark in the parade. No. 33 acquitted themselves handsomely.

— Mr. Fred Rogers of the First National Bank has been in the habit of much the fashion there—but the sea views, cool breezes, and pleasing landscapes of Mt. Desert. A party of gentlemen stopping at the hotel where Mr. Blake and daughter were chartered from Syria a few weeks ago and look down the coast which was one of the pleasantest features of the visit. Nature and art together have made an exceedingly attractive watering place of Har Harbor.

— Mr. E. N. Blake returned from Har Harbor on Sunday morning. He and his daughter enjoyed their visit at that very fashionable seaside resort—so much the fashion there—but the sea views, cool breezes, and pleasing landscapes of Mt. Desert. A party of gentlemen stopping at the hotel where Mr. Blake and daughter were chartered from Syria a few weeks ago and look down the coast which was one of the pleasantest features of the visit. Nature and art together have made an exceedingly attractive watering place of Har Harbor.

— The wife and children of Rev. F. W. March of Syria, who are living for the present with Mrs. March's parents at Auburndale, came over yesterday and visited Rev. Dr. March at his home at Deacon G. R. Gage's on Montvale Ave. In the evening a reception, quite informal and neighborly, was given to Mrs. March in the parlors of the Gage residence which was attended by quite a number of friends of the families and people interested in foreign missionary work.

— Mrs. March and her children arrived from Syria a few weeks ago and look for the husband and father, who is Rev. Dr. March's son, to come over next fall. It is expected that the family will remain in this side of the world a year or so, and at the close of their visit Rev. Dr. March will resume missionary work in that distant part. The reception was a very pleasant affair.

— Rev. Lyman Bartlett, Missionary in Smyrna, delivered a very interesting discourse in the lecture room of the First Congregational Church, this city, last Wednesday evening. He has been at Smyrna about five years and had previously served 17 years in Asia Minor, where he had spiritual charge of the district of country in which were located the "seven churches of Asia" founded by the Apostles. His manner and matter were very entertaining and instructive.

— It is currently reported that Mr. Lawrence Reade will be a candidate for Mayor this fall providing Mayor Johnson absolutely declines a re-election. Mr. Reade would make a good Mayor. He has the business ability, the push, the liberality which would make his administration of municipal affairs a great success. It is currently reported too that Mr. Thomas Salmon will be one of Mr. Reade's strongest and most active supporters. Mr. Salmon is a political power in this city.

— When Janitor John Connolly went into the lodging room of the city lock-up Wednesday morning to rouse Mr. John Rainey from his sleep, he found him dead. He went into the room in a sick, exhausted condition the afternoon before, but what time he died was not known. He was 64 years old, and his home was at Franklin Falls, N. H. His son came from that place on Thursday and took the remains of his father to his home. Medical Examiner March said he died from natural causes.

— The spacious addition to Mr. C. M. Munroe's store is nearly completed and everything is being settled in business order rapidly. The addition is about equal in square feet to the old store and when they come to be made one room of there can't be produced in Woburn better quarters to sell clothing and other goods of the kind at than it is. Naturally Mr. Munroe feels very much pleased with his new store. Mr. Webster Woodman, salesman, is also pleased with the material increase of room to do business in.

— Mr. Charles March, son of Rev. Dr

The Death of Mr. O'Reilly.

The sudden death of Mr. John Boyle O'Reilly, the gifted editor of the Pilot, will be a painful surprise to the community, all the greater because Mr. O'Reilly's well known devotion to outdoor life and his rare physical vigor gave every outward promise that he would live beyond the allotted three score years and ten. The picturesque circumstances attending Mr. O'Reilly's coming to this country made him an interesting figure from the first, and it was not long before he demonstrated that he possessed a talent of a high order. Besides his exquisite poetry, through which he is best known to the general public, his editorial work in connection with the Pilot has done much to give that journal the wide range of influence which it enjoys among the people of Mr. O'Reilly's race and faith in the towns and cities of New England. Mr. O'Reilly had the true poetic instinct. He knew how to touch the chords of humanity. He was unquestionably one of the most admired of the younger poets of America, and many of his songs hold a position in the popular heart from which the lapse of years will find it very difficult to displace them. His later poems suggested a ripening genius, and a capacity for the most serious kind of work, with little or no abatement of the poet's youthful ardor. Mr. O'Reilly's sudden and untimely death is profoundly to be regretted.—Boston Journal.

Italy desires a new steamship line between Naples and London, and according to the prevalent European policy it proposes to establish one by means of an annual subsidy of $70,000. This, it is said, is a large sum to receive a subsidy almost as large as the aggregate amount expended by our own great, rich and generous Government for its foreign mail service on all the vessels flying the American flag. Yet there are people who profess to wonder that even little Italy should be outstripping us in competition for the world's carrying trade.

To Nervous Debilitated Men.

If you will send your address, we will mail you our illustrated pamphlet explaining all about Dr. Dye's Celebrated Electro-Voltaic Belt and Appliances, and their charming effects upon the nervous debilitated system, and how they will quickly restore you to vigor and manhood. If you are thus afflicted, we will send you a Belt and Appliances on a trial. Pamphlet free. Voltaic Belt Co., Marshall, Mich.

The Methodist church at Mayville, N. Y., is raising its debt of $600 by keeping a summer boarding house at Chautauque. One member of the church had charge of the house during July, and another is in care of it during August. The waters are the belles of Mayville, and have been volunteered for the service. Two new ones come every week, and the others go home for a rest. Extra volunteers do the work on Sunday. The cook is the only paid servant. Even the provisions are contributed, and plenty of young men are about to do the "toting" and heavy work for nothing.

In answers to correspondents in an English paper for ladies, intending travelers to this country are warned not to try to wear out their old clothes while in America. "Ill-made gowns in the modes of a past season are not to be thought of in America, where women dress well. Not only do they buy good, suitable and fashionable clothes, but they understand exactly how to put them on, and make it a matter of consequence to do so well."

Stockings.

"Have you washed your feet?" You think this is a queer question to ask, but it is one that many Mammus have got in the habit of asking the boys and girls as "Have you washed your hands?"

And Why? Because it has been almost impossible to get Stockings that wouldn't crock and fade!

But alas! for Pearlina. We have got a Line of Stockings Worth much more than many so called "Fast Blacks," which will please the Mammus and the boys and girls as well, and not cost any more. Sizes to fit everybody from baby to grandmamma.

Pearline has its place but it will not have to be used to wash out the stains left by the "LINWORTH."

WINCHESTER.

West Medford decorated in fine style on Tuesday.

Mrs. Jessie and Eugene Walker are at Kennebunk, Me.

The Misses Quinby are taking their vacation at No. Conway.

Safford Cottage, Cottage City, is the present address of Miss Carrie Rounds.

Next month Deaconesses will be appointed by the Congregational Church.

Everybody left town last Tuesday to see the great G. A. R. parade in Boston.

The Star utters a wail over the lack of a bandstand and absence of band concerts.

Rev. Mr. Newton, pastor of the Congregational church, is taking his vacation.

People will be glad to hear that Deacon Luther Richardson is getting well again.

It was late when the last ones got home, and some of them were hungry and cross.

Look out for the adjourned town meeting. Some people are looting on heaps of fun at it.

William A. Snow, Jr., Cadet in the U. S. Navy, has gone on a 2-year voyage to South America.

Mr. John Fitzgerald of Portville, N. Y., is visiting his sister, Mrs. Patrick Nelson, in this town.

The Star tells those who don't know whether Gen. Corse, the Boston postmaster, lives here or not to come and see for themselves.

They do say that if a true story of how free mail delivery was secured for Winchester was told in detail it would make some people's eyes stick out.

A good many Winchester people who have been taking their summer outing are beginning to crawl back home tired and pretty well worn out with "resting."

Miss Marston, one of Winchester's most accomplished school teachers, is at Limington, York county, Me. It is a nice quiet old town to do summer resting in.

Mr. William Nelson, a prominent young man of this town and a member of Rumford Hose Co., No. 4, started from here yesterday afternoon for Denver, Colorado, where he intends to go into business for himself.

The pulpit of the Congregational Church will be filled as follows the rest of this month while pastor Newton is away on his vacation: 17, Rev. Dr. J. L. Jenkins of Pittsfield; 24, Rev. Dr. H. L. Perkins of Racine, Wis.; 31, Rev. C. B. Rhea of Danvers.

Boston Herald: Messrs. Twombly & Sons, the well-known Boston florists, have, in decorating the Presidential suite, done so artistic and beautiful a piece of work as to give them an even stronger claim than before to the title of "Presidential decorators." It will be remembered that Mr. Twombly, Sr., has many times visited the White House and done very beautiful work there. Hence, it was very appropriate that the house of which he is the head should be given the contract for decorating the beautiful apartments which President Harrison is to occupy during his coming visit to Boston.

Burlington.

Extensive repairs are being made on the East choolhouse.

The church will be opened next Sunday for regular services.

There's a peculiar advertisement on our local page this week about "A Fast Black." On first glance we thought it was advertising some horse race, but when we found it was boasting ladies' fast black hose at $6 a pair, we realized that we were in an advertisement peculiar unto itself. Read it carefully.

A Brooklyn manufacturer paid a bill without a murmur the other day simply on account of the way it was worded. His engineer found that the lathe later pump would not work and sent for a machinist. The latter bothered with it half a day and said it must come apart. This meant a stoppage of the factory for a long time. It was suggested that a neighboring engineer be sent for, as he was a sort of genius in the matter of machinery. He came, and after studying the pump a while he took a hammer and gave three sharp raps over the valve. "I reckon she'll go now," he quietly said, and putting on steam "she" did go. The next day, says the manufacturer, I received a bill from him for $25.50. The price amazed me, but when I had examined the items I drew a check at once. The bill read this way: "Messrs. Black & Co., Dr. to John Smith. For fixing pump, fifty cents. For knowing how, $25." Had he charged me $25.50 for fixing the pump I should have considered it exorbitant. But fifty cents was reasonable, and I recognized the value of knowledge, so I paid and said nothing.

Gen. J. B. Weaver has been prevailed upon to accept the Democratic nomination for Congress in the Seventh Iowa District. There has been a severe drought in the district and the farmers have been bothered by grasshoppers, and in view of these calamities Gen. Weaver has strong hopes that the district may go Democratic, though it is normally Republican. Weaver is an adept at attributing droughts and grasshoppers and hog cholera and such things to Republican protection.

PROFESSIONAL BOUNCERS.

They Ejected Two Loafers from a Theatre Without Creating a Panic.

"There came near being a riot at the theatre to-night," a lady and a gentleman dropping into the Chicago club the other evening. "A man was annoying people seated near him, and they put him out. The house was crowded, and the row came near creating a panic. Women screamed, men jumped in and the play was temporarily stopped."

"It's a wonder there wasn't a panic," replied an old time first nighter who was present. "Nothing's more dangerous than any sort of commotion in a theatre. But I suppose this row was all caused by reason of the freshness of the men who went to eject the disturber. There's a right way and a wrong way to do such things. The audience needn't have been alarmed at all if it had been properly done. Do you remember Billy Emmett?"

"No, who was he?"

"Billy? Oh, he was the manager at one time of the Broadway and is another of the Olympic theatre. He's dead now, poor fellow! Well, Billy would have had the disturbing party out of that theatre without any trouble whatever. In fact, he'd have made it rather a diversion for the audience."

"You see Billy had a great reverence for women. He never let a lady stand in his house. If he couldn't give her a seat he wouldn't sell her a ticket. He wouldn't tolerate a tough or a masher. If one ever made the slightest slip in Billy's house out he went. No lady could be insulted or even corrected there, where he was."

"But to come to the question of putting a man out. I remember once at the Olympic a gentleman came out to the box office window and complained to the treasurer that there were two men seated behind him and his wife. He said they were smoking and expectorating under the seat, much to the damage of the lady's dress. I have asked them to stop, the gentleman continued, 'but they refuse to do so.'"

"What's that?" said Billy, who was in the office. "Well, they will stop, sir, you can depend on that. They let a stay in my theatre at all. Not a minute. Just wait a second."

"Billy rushed into the house, located the two loafers and came back to the door, where he summoned his two 'bouncers.' One of 'em, I remember, was a regular fellow named Thurston. He was an expert fighter and a corker. The other was an all round athlete. He put them on to the two men and gave them their cue."

"A few moments later the curtain fell on an act, and Billy, urbane and debonair, appeared in front of it."

"Well, going back to the whole lot, I regret to inform you that there are two loafers sitting right over there who have annoyed the lady in front of them by expectorating tobacco upon her dress. Now they are going to leave the house. They have declined to go, and are going to put me to the test of your seats, please, and don't expect me."

"As Billy finished Thurston and his assistant walked down the aisle, stepped into the row behind the two toughs, leaped over and told them to leave the theatre. Both the loafers were big, husky brutes and they refused."

"Well, go if you can put 'em out," they said, and clutched the arms of their chairs. That was enough. Thurston and the other fellow just stooped over, reached under the chairs, gave one mighty heave and up came the whole aggregation—toughs, chairs and all—the screws pulled right loose from the wood. The crowd went wild, and up the aisle, the toughs struggling in vain, out the door and shot the two men, chairs and all, into the center of Clark street with the force of a catapult. Everybody applauded and laughed and the show went on."

"That showed Billy Emmett's tact. He hadn't explained to the audience there would have been danger of a free fight, a panic or what not. People always interfere in a row they don't understand and a crowded theatre where there are women is a mighty dangerous place to lay one out."—Chicago Mail.

Several Private Secretaries.

The private secretaries of Secretaries Blaine, Proctor and Noble are merely clerks, and do not have the swing that some of the others have. Louis A. Denz who attends to the correspondence of Secretary Blaine, is a young man, a son of the late Gen. Josiah Denz, of this city. For many years Mr. Blaine had a private secretary who was one in fact. This was Mr. Thomas H. Sherman, who was the right hand of Mr. Blaine for many years. He is now consul general at Liverpool, having been appointed to that office by President Harrison.—Chatter.

ELM TREE WORSHIPERS.

For Four Centuries the New Englanders Have Cultivated and Nurtured It.

The elm tree is dear to the heart of the New Englander. No other tree is associated in his mind with the idea of home. It forms the most remarkable feature of the domestic New England landscape, and in no part of the country is there a tree which occupies the same position in the affection of the people as the elm does in that of the inhabitants of New England.

The people who settled the shores of Massachusetts brought with them the remembrance of the elm trees, which were such an important and conspicuous feature in the country where they had been bred; and it is not surprising that they sought to reproduce in the new country something of the old by planting by their doors the most familiar of the English "roof trees."

So the habit grew of setting an elm tree close by the home hewn out in the wilderness, and these house trees, planted by the early settlers of New England or by their descendants of the third generation, are the oldest and noblest trees which have been planted by man in North America.

The affection for the elm tree, thus early developed in the New England heart, often saved it when the land was being cleared for cultivation; and when roads were made and provided with trees, as they were more generally in New England a hundred years ago than they are now, the elm naturally was selected to shade the traveler from the burning sun of summer. The noble stem supporting the broad head of light and pendulous branches, the delicate spray, indescribably beautiful in winter, and the abundant foliage of summer make the American elm one of the most desirable roadside trees when placed in a suitable situation, and a fitting ornament to stand by the stately mansion or the humblest farm house.

Has a large number of very desirable House Lots other than those of the W. & L. C. Co., which he has been formerly in her service, and who he has been discharged for general bad behavior. She had also suspected him of purloining several objects which she had missed from time to time but not being certain on that point, she had kept her suspicions to herself. Yes, there he was, there could be no mistake.

Madame Lucrezia's first impulse was

Her blood ran cold. She dared not give her maid the slightest hint of the real state of matters; she felt the girl would go into a fit then and there, and thus bring on a crisis. Scarcely knowing what she was doing, Madame Lucrezia replied at random:

"Murder us? What for?"

"What for, your ladyship? Why, for your money—for your jewels, to be sure, nearly everybody knows you have plenty of them." The girl must have been unconsciously sharpening, so to speak, the knife by which she

IT DIDN'T PAY.

The Penny Press, like many other papers that have tried it, finds that a semi-weekly does not pay and will come out this week as an eight page weekly. It is a good weekly, or to divide it up into six or seven daily parts and give it out to the public in instalments, cheapens it in public estimation and in reality, and in nine cases out of ten proves a disastrous operation for the publisher.

It is confidently predicted by the wisest in such matters that the Weekly is to be the coming newspaper. It stands higher and is considered more valuable now than 15 years ago, and it is rapidly regaining its old place in the good graces of the more enlightened classes.

To the sensational and unreliable character of the metropolitan daily and local literary and editorial matter, the weekly is a most reliable and to the correctness of its news and views, and is also, when at its best, a more respectable appearing paper than the hastily and often carelessly made up city daily, and many fold more so than the daily productions which a very few country publishers are forever hankering after until the bantlings compass their financial ruin—and it is mainly because this is thus that men who think are firm in the conviction that the Weekly is destined to supplant, in the near future, the daily, and become the principal public news-monger as well as the true representative, if not the maker, of public opinion among the better and more intelligent classes of people everywhere.

HURRY UP, GENTLEMEN.

There are two important measures now pending before Congress which the Republicans want to see passed, and that too without any unnecessary delay. They are getting tired of waiting for that body to make a final move and put through the two measures which they want, namely, the Tariff and the Federal Election bills, and unless some action to the purpose is taken at once measures may hear something not to their advantage before a great while.

There is nothing to hinder the bill going through with a rush if the Republicans in Congress have only a mind to say so. The Democratic party, however, and the fact of their being held back is inexplicable on any other hypothesis than that a considerable member of Republicans of both branches do not want to have them passed.

It is by no means certain that either the Tariff or Election bill will be enacted this session, and quite certain that only one of them can be. At the best, this is not what the Republican members have been promising us all along, but within a week a change has come over the spirit of their dreams and they are not entirely sure that any thing at all can be done towards mending the tariff laws, or giving the country a wholesome salute on Federal Elections. There seems to be too many conflicting interests among the Republicans to render it any where near certain that the two bills named, or either one of them, will ever come to a vote.

THE 5TH DISTRICT.

Gen. Banks will be a candidate for re-election, while there is a general feeling among the Republicans of the District that a younger and more active man is necessary in order to save the District. But they are not agreed on any one, and it will be a hard thing to overcome General over. Yet many believe that his nomination means defeat. If he is re-nominated, whether elected or not, it will mean Gov. Brackett in 1892. If some one else is chosen this year, it will be either Mr. Hayden of Woburn or Col. Tower of Lexington.—Woburn Record.

There are many prominent men in every town and village in the District who would like to be able to procure Mr. Hayden's consent to be returned to Congress, but the JOURNAL is able to say on the best of authority that he is "out of politics" permanently, and would not under any circumstances accept of the nomination this fall.

A TERRIBLE RAILROAD ACCIDENT.

In another column of the JOURNAL may be found an abridged account of the frightful railroad accident which occurred near Quincy on the Old Colony last Tuesday afternoon in which 22 persons lost their lives and thirty more were injured. It was more fatal in its results than any that has happened in the vicinity of Boston since the Bussey Bridge one.

It is with much surprise and equal pleasure that we learn from the North Andover (Me.) Advocate of the nomination of Hon. and ex. Rev. Joseph O. Barrett for Lieut. Governor of Minnesota by the Farmers Alliance of that State. As he had previously received a nomination for the same office from the Prohibition Party it looks as if our old schoolmate and fellow-townsmen might possibly make connections and secure the seat; and if he should do so nobody would rejoice more heartily over his good fortune than the Editor of the JOURNAL. Barrett was cut out for leadership in parties, political and religious, made up of the uncommemorable, unique, bizarre, and not overly practical, and the unsolicited situation in which he finds himself out there in Minnesota must have enough of instability, impracticability, and "rainbow chasing" in it to fill his soul and plan full of peace and joy and rest. We rather hope Hon. J. O. B. will be elected even if it should be at the expose of a defeat to our own political friends and messmates, for men of his integrity and ability are not put forward for high places in State councils any too often, and besides, Barrett is a worthy gentleman all the way up and down and would do honor to the exalted position for which he is stumping the State.

The comparatively youthful but very vigorous Somerville Citizen is rapidly lengthening the gap between itself and its neighbor the Somerville Journal, and kids fair very soon to get so far ahead as to be entirely out of sight of it. About all that keeps the Journal about anyway is its alleged funny column which for laughter-provoking qualities is as devoid of a future as it is easy to conceive of. We are right glad to see the Citizen forge ahead and prosper as it has been doing for the last couple of years.

The admirable oration delivered by Samuel W. McCall, Esq., at the great Winchester celebration last July has been issued in pamphlet form, a copy of which found its way to this office last Tuesday. The sender will please accept our thanks.

We have lately received from the Home Market Club several valuable documents on the tariff question, including speeches by McKinley, Rice and Lawrence.

The salary for this instructor was placed at $250 per annum.

A few days ago Librarian Cutter received a photographic view of a great Alaska glacier from Mr. Leonard Thompson who was privileged to get a sight of the monster the other day. A piece of solid ice 120 feet high, 500 feet deep under water, 1-1/4 miles wide on the water edge, and extending back as far as human vision could reach, and how much further nobody knows—a chunk of ice like that we should think would rejoice the heart of any well-regulated dealer to look at.

Mr. Chester R. Smith, salesman and advertising manager of the C. Willard Smith's dry goods establishment, went to Lubec, Maine, some days ago for a fortnight's vacation and is supposed to be at the present time trying to emerge from a State of Maine in which it is surmised he has been wandering about ever since he made land at L. When he gets out he may be interested to learn that the store is prospering, and the people in it are as bright and lively as ever.

Frye, the upholsterer, brought up from the New Hampshire home occupied by his mother before her death a year, some old fashioned bellows which had been in the family over 60 years and is at the present time as good as new. The bellows was a necessary household utensil in the old days of fires, wood fires, and absence of stoves, and one of them always hung up just over the shovel and tongs in every well arranged family chimney corner. They look quite a good ground over the ancient piece of furniture.

The Foresters of this city went to Nantuxet in strong force last Wednesday for their annual picnic. Fine weather was vouchsafed them and a day of genuine pleasure was spent there. All sorts of athletic sports were indulged in, the dinner was a fine one, and everything passed off in the very best manner.

Mr. Frank Dodge and wife have got back from their European tour and have settled down to everyday life again. They had a pleasant voyage each way and a delightful visit on the other side. ENTERING THE KINGDOM.

LESSON IX, THIRD QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, AUG. 31.

Text of the Lesson, Luke xvi, 15-30. Commentary by Rev. Dr. M. Stearns.

(Compiled from Lesson History Quarterly by permission of H. R. Hoffman, publisher, Philadelphia.)

15. And they brought unto him little children, that he would touch them: but when he had rebuked them, they brought them in, and he laid his hands on them, and blessed them. The two incidents of this lesson—the little children and the rich young ruler—are recorded also in Matt. xix, and Mark x. According to Mark and Luke the request was that he should touch them, and according to Matthew He was asked to put his hands on them and pray.

16. But Jesus called them unto him, and said, Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not: for of such is the Kingdom of God. Mark adds that He was much displeased. Is there a possibility that we displease Him by not being more interested in bringing the little children unto Him? Surely here is great encouragement for the teachers of the infant classes. But in what sense can it be said that "of such is the Kingdom"? It cannot be their innocence, for all are born sinners, children of Adam (Rom. v, 12, 13), and we go astray as soon as we are born. But see how empty, helpless and dependent an infant is. He has nothing, needs everything, and when we see that that is our condition before God, and come in our helplessness to Him, we shall be accepted of Him, and become children of the Kingdom. As to the safety of little infants who die before they come to the knowledge of God, and enter His Kingdom, we must remember that God knows how to make the precious blood of Christ avail for them. The streets of the city shall be full of them (Zech. viii, 5).

17. Verily I say unto you, Whosoever shall not receive the Kingdom as a little child, shall not enter therein. What, then, shall become of such as will not accept the humiliating truth that "in them dwelleth no good thing," and that "by the deeds of the law (our very best doings) no flesh can be justified in His sight" (Rom. vii, 13, 14, 20, who persist in thinking that if they do as best they can, God will not cast them out).

18. And a certain ruler asked him, saying, Good Master, what shall I do to inherit eternal life? He said unto him, Why callest thou me good, seeing I know none but God? He said unto him, Thou art right, for there is one God, and thou shalt love Him with all thy heart, with all thy strength, with all thy mind, and with all thy power: and thy neighbor as thyself. He said unto him, I have done all these things, and yet I lack yet one thing. What shall I do to inherit eternal life? He said unto him, Thou art right, for there is one God, and thou shalt love Him with all thy heart, with all thy strength, with all thy mind, and with all thy power: and thy neighbor as thyself. He said unto him, I have done all these things, and yet I lack yet one thing. What shall I do to inherit eternal life? He said unto him, Thou art right, for there is one God, and thou shalt love Him with all thy heart, with all thy strength, with all thy mind, and with all thy power: and thy neighbor as thyself.

19. And Jesus said unto him, Why callest thou me good, seeing I know none but God? He said unto him, Thou art right, for there is one God, and thou shalt love Him with all thy heart, with all thy strength, with all thy mind, and with all thy power: and thy neighbor as thyself. He said unto him, I have done all these things, and yet I lack yet one thing. What shall I do to inherit eternal life? WHY?

Dear heart, why should this address come before you? After Love clasped our hands? Why should we always mourn "It might have been." Thinking of golden bands?

Was it your fault or mine? I do not know, Sweet, you could never dream How I have prayed for light to save my woe, Yet never once a beam.

For once I seemed to hold you by some charm; Was it too small to last? What was the subtle cause that did the harm, After our love lit past?

The income from a lifeless rose you wore Faint floated through the room, And stealing to my tortured heart it bore Symbol of withered bloom.

Why did you come into my life to steal My peace, and then to go? What have I done, this sorrow sword to feel? Dear God, why is it so?

A Young Author's Good Fortune.
The experience of Mr. F. Eaton, the winner of The Youth's Companion prize of $1,000 for the best story for girls in the recent competition, is a striking illustration of the success that occasionally comes to a writer of fiction, wholly unknown writers of fiction. His prize story, "Way Out in the Prarie," which appeared in the memorial day issue of the Companion, was the second story he ever wrote and the first one that he ever submitted to a publisher. Mr. Eaton is 33 years of age, married, and a lawyer by vocation. He enjoys a lucrative practice at Olean, N. Y., the place of his birth, and is now serving his seventh term as city attorney.

In his fifteenth year Mr. Eaton received a severe gunshot wound while hunting pigeons, which deprived him of the end of one finger and filled an arm with bird shot. At the age of 19 he conceived the idea that a farmer's life would perhaps restore his health, and accordingly he went to Skaneateles, N. Y., "thru out" to a farmer, and he remained on a farm for six months. There seemed to be so little money in the farming business, however, that he resigned, and in 1877 began the study of law at Olean. The pecuniary rewards of a law student are not usually great, and to swell his income Mr. Eaton went to Cleveland, Pa., and taught school among the miners for a time, keeping bachelor's hall in a little cabin. In 1880 he was admitted to the bar. Mr. Eaton has always been an omnivorous reader, and a great admirer of Nathaniel Hawthorne.—Current Literature.

Antiquity of the Zither.
The zither is no child of these later days. Quite the reverse. The ancient Egyptians had an instrument which called a kinnor, and which in all essential points was the prototype of the zither. This was some three thousand years ago, and from that time down to the present there has always been an instrument in the hands of one of the leading nations of the world. It was in most respects identical with the zither. In the time of David and Solomon the zither was played in the great temple of Jerusalem, and the ancient Greeks valued their kithara very highly, and the names of Terpander of Lesbos and of Aristoxenos of Chios have come down to us as those of virtuosos on this zither like instrument.—American Art Journal.

A Curious Anesthetic.
A curious anesthetic used by the Chinese has recently been made known by Dr. H. Langner in his annual report of the Szechow hospital. It is obtained by placing a frog in a jar of liquid which forms a paste with the frog. This paste dissolved in water has well marked anesthetic properties. After the finger has been immersed in the liquid for a few minutes it can be cut to the bone without any pain being felt.—St. Louis Republic.

100 Ladies Wanted.
And 100 men to call on any druggist for a free trial package of Lane's Family Medicine, the great root and herb remedy, discovered by Dr. Silas Lane while in the Rocky Mountains. For diseases of the Blood, Liver and Kidneys it is a positive cure. For constipation and clearing up the complexion it does wonders. It is the best spring medicine known. Large size package, 50 cents. At all druggists.

Certain moths, as the parent of the common red and black "beet" caterpillar, and of the salt-marsh caterpillar, have a retractile organ, which, when thrust out, throws off a strong odor, somewhat like lardum.

Sufferers from indigestion, loss of appetite, liver or kidney complaints, rheumatism or neuralgia, would do well to give Ayer's Sarsaparilla a trial. For all such disorders, no medicine is so effective as this, which faithfully and perseveringly used.

Vegetable Intelligence.
An illustration of apparent intelligence in plants is the behavior of the Egyptian lotus in this climate. In the warmer countries, where it is at home, the roots of the lotus spread laterally close to the surface. In this country the plant learned, after a single year's experience of a New Jersey winter, to prepare for this freezing season by abandoning its surface lateral roots in early autumn and sending out a crop of roots lower down—so far down that they were below the reach of frost. In this way the plant kept up its life continuously over winter, and when spring returned the deep level roots were abandoned in their turn and the surface roots once more sent out.

Then there are certain minute plants, some of them quite microscopic, which grow in vayside pools, and which move continually in whorls or spirals, without any moving influence in the water. In the aerial form of the plant, the life of the emulsion of the profoundest men of science is required to determine whether they are animal or vegetable in their nature. And then who knows whether the scientists are quite right? The moral of the whole matter is that in this two forms of life, but which have yielded when you have said that? Does the fact of the identity prove that there is spirit in matter, or that animal, human intelligence is merely a phase of matter? You pay the money of your education and take your choice of the two horns of the dilemma.—Boston Transcript.

The Significance of Stones.
The Jews, it will be possibly remembered by many, had a tradition that when, on the day of atonement, the high priest asked of the Almighty for forgiveness for the sins of the whole nation, if they were forgiven, the stones in the Crim and Thummin shone most brightly; if the contrary, they became black. The breast plate of the high priest contained twelve stones, each of which represented the tribes of Israel.

Coming down to a later time, there were certain stones which symbolized the twelve apostles. Peter is represented by the Jasper or garnet, Andrew by the sapphire, James by the emerald, John by the emerald, Philip by the topaz, Bartholomew by the cornelian, Matthew by the chrysolite, Thomas by the beryl, Thaddeus by the chrysolite, James the lesser by the topaz, Simon by the jacinth and Matthias by the amethyst. It is scarcely probable that these humble men of Galilee, who were so ignorant of the presence of the stone, as the last rays of the sunset died off the feathers of the mighty temple round us, there issued from the temple a man of extreme age, clad in white robes, and closely shaven as to his face and head.

It was a simple, clay built, whitewashed building, the tall peaked roof of straw being supported on a few old and massive beams, whose projecting ends were quaintly carved. A flight of six or seven broken stone steps led up to the temple, and the entrance was on a little crescent bar a beautiful old bronze bell.

On either side of the building a little row of very simply constructed cells or cubicles occupied part of the longer sides of the quadrangle. Before each cell a small, naked, sand-colored, and sacred Hindu statue, and busy with the cooking of chapatties, of a singularly thick and coarse kind.

The setting sun struck shafts of light through the delicate foliage of the topmost bamboo. The priests sat silent and motionless, and the air was very still, as if ignorant of our presence. Then, as the last rays of the sunset died off the feathers of the mighty temple round us, there issued from the temple a man of extreme age, clad in white robes, and closely shaven as to his face and head.

It was not to be wondered at, since these stones were used by diviners, and to beauty and adornment, and the high priesthood, that something of their virtue should be held to belong to the holy men who taught such beautiful truths to humanity.—Sally Joy White.

Discovery Near Beyrout.
A correspondent writes to us: "An English lady resident in Syria reports the following interesting discovery in the neighborhood of Beyrout. In a village about one hour's ride from the great French road between Beyrout and Damascus was found a bed of mud made of gold and silver and inlaid with precious stones. An inscription upon it in English characters states that it belonged to Eleanor, queen of England. The bedstead was discovered in a little recess dug out for the purpose of hiding the treasure for security when Edward I left the east in 1272. The Turkish government has taken possession of the treasure, though the prevailing opinion in the district seems to be that it should remain the property of the man on whose land it was found. It would be interesting to know what the Turks propose to do with it. But if the inscription calls Eleanor queen of England the words cannot have been placed upon it before Edward left Syria, as he did not hear of his father's death until he reached Italy. There is no record, however, of the fact that the bedstead had been buried in the earth for the last six centuries."—London News.

How Sins Reeves Was Found.
Sins Reeves, the great English tenor, was discovered by accident. When Macready was manager of Drury Lane theatre he brought out, among other revivals, Dryden's "King Arthur," with all Purcell's music. During the rehearsals the musical director was in despair of being able to find any one who could do justice to the solos in "Come, if You Dares." James Macready, the tragedian, who was a member of the company, had noticed the voice of a young chorus singer and suggested him as a solution of the difficulty. He was laughed at by Cooke. Macready, however, becoming impressed by Anderson's persistency, desired Cooke to try the young man alone. In less than twenty minutes Cooke returned in raptures of delight. Reeves made a great hit and was nightly encircled in his magnificent solos.—London Graphic.

Stanley's Austrian Admirer.
One day an Austrian enthusiast called and sent in a polite note asking Stanley for an interview for the night. Stanley, the tragedian, who was a member of the company, had noticed the voice of a young chorus singer and suggested him as a solution of the difficulty. He was laughed at by Cooke. Macready, however, becoming impressed by Anderson's persistency, desired Cooke to try the young man alone. In less than twenty minutes Cooke returned in raptures of delight. COUNTERFEITER PETE MCARTNEY

One of the Most Successful Crooks in the West. The cleverest thief that ever I had any thing to do with while connected with the secret service department of the United States treasury department, said Maj. Thomas E. Lonnegan, was Pete McCartney. He was born and raised in southern Illinois, and could not boast any education. Yet he was in every sense a picturesque figure in criminal annals. He was the only man I ever met who educated himself so as to be able to do everything connected with counterfeiting.

Two years ago I became suddenly ill. At first I supposed my trouble was nothing but a common cold, but I grew worse, and, in a few weeks, was compelled to give up work. The doctor told me that I had bronchitis, which he said would not be cured in less than a month. I was entirely cured by a severe attack of

I captured him at Venice, Ills., on Bloody Island, the famous old dueling ground of that section of the country. This was a little north of East St. Louis. This was in the fall of 1871. I took McCartney to Springfield and turned him over to United States Marshal Rott, who was afterward governor of Colorado. McCartney was charged with the counterfeiting of United States money and committed to jail in the sum of $500,000. Negotiations were entered into by the treasury department that McCartney should turn up certain plates for counterfeiting notes, and that in return his bill should be reduced to $25,000. The agreement was made, but McCartney never appeared to give up the plates and $25,000 in counterfeit money. He had to go to De Carter, Ills., where he had buried it, to dig it up.

During the time that this notorious counterfeiter was out on bail he was arrested in St. Louis, and was seriously shot in the breast that followed the attempt to arrest him. While in jail on crutches he broke out and left, taking with him four other counterfeiters who were confined at the same time. A few weeks subsequently he was again arrested in Texas. A big reward had been offered for his capture. The sheriff who arrested him telegraphed for the United States officials to come and take possession of him. To make his escape impossible this sheriff and his posse camped out all night with McCartney, but he got away before morning.

He was again arrested shortly after he had been released from jail. To secure him effectually this time the official manacled McCartney's arms and legs and started for Austin. When the train reached Austin McCartney had made his escape. During the war he was arrested on some charge in Indiana, and taken to the Washington military prison, and from there he escaped by jumping out of the window of the Pennsylvania train passing Horseshoe Bend. This is the most dangerous point on the whole road. He dislocated his shoulder, but suffered no other injury. Finally he was captured in Indiana, conveyed to the penitentiary at Michigan City. He is an old man now, but in his best days was one of the most slippery fellows that I ever heard of.—Chicago Post.

An Easy Place.
A lad once stepped into our office in search of a situation. He was asked: "Are you not now employed?" "Yes, sir," "Then why do you wish to change?" "Oh, I want an easier place."

We had not a place for him. No one wants a boy or man who is seeking an easy place; yet just here is the difficulty with thousands. They want easy work and are afraid of earning more than their wages.

Will the boys let us advise them? In for a good place, and your services to the task of showing how much you can do. Make yourself serviceable to your employer at whatever cost of your own personal ease, and if you do this he will soon find that he cannot spare you, and when you have learned how to do work you may be set to teach others to do the same.

Photographing Leaves at Night.
"I was walking along Union square, New York, one evening, and a photographer attracted my attention by placing his camera almost in front of me. I stopped and asked him what he was doing there at night with a photograph outfit, and he surprised me by saying: 'Do you see those shadows there on the pavement? The electric light paints them on the asphalt, and I take photographs of them for a big wall paper company. They thus get the exact shape of the leaf of every kind of tree, and the engravers have nature right under their eyes. Nothing could be so perfect as the leaves which are made by our firm. In the daytime I photograph flowers and grasses for designs in the factory, but at night, you see, the electric light gives me the perfect form of the leaves.'"

A Successful Lawyer.
Mr. Bourke Cockran is said to be outdoing his own performance in the late Boston Cooking in making money from law practice. Some persons put his earnings in the last three years at half a million dollars. Those who do not admire him suggest that this is earning a living by the sweat of a man's mouth; but we can tell them that no one gets rich in New York nowadays by sweat and labor or on the equivalent.—Julian Ralph in Chatter.

The breath of a chronic catarrh patient is often so offensive that he becomes an object of disgust. After a time ulceration of the throat is attacked, and the patient frequently entirely destroyed. A constant source of discomfort is the dripping of the purulent secretions into the throat, sometimes so profuse that the patient is obliged to turn his head back in order to swallow it. In its turn has been the exciting cause of pulmonary disease. The brilliant results which have attended its use for years past properly designate Ely's Cream Balm as by far the best and only cure.

Brain culture, like physical culture, is governed by regular laws; and it is only by complying with these laws that the result can be obtained. Plenty of good food for nutrition, and vigorous exercise to strengthen and discipline natural power, are the two fundamental laws in both forms of culture.

Speedy Relief In all Cases

[N]umbers of Lung and Throat troubles, is afforded by Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, the best known and most effective cough remedy. As an emergency medicine, this preparation is invaluable.

A metal has been produced that will melt at a temperature of 150 degrees. It is an alloy of lead, tin, bismuth and cadmium, and in weight, hardness and color resembles type metal. It melts so easily that, placed on a comparatively cool part of the stove with a piece of paper under it, it will melt without the paper being scorched.

Blood Poison.
Is very liable to blood contact of the hands or face with what is known as poison ivy, especially in hot weather or if the body is perspiring freely. The trouble may subside for a time, only to appear in aggravated form when opportunity offers. The great purifying power of Hood's Sarsaparilla thoroughly eradicates every trace of poison from the blood, as the cure of it has accomplished conclusively show. It also cures eczema, skin rheum and all other affections arising from impure or poisoned blood.

The cars on the Jungfrau Railway, in Switzerland, have movable flaps, which may be expanded by the guard until they nearly touch the tunnel lining. In this way the car becomes a kind of piston, acting in the tunnel as a cylinder, and the air acts as an automatic brake to check the speed of the descending car.

The use of the electro-magnet for indicating the presence of submerged torpedoes or lost anchors has been suggested. The magnet, in connection with a delicate strain dynamometer, is lowered into the water and excited by a battery. The metal will attract the magnet and the dynamometer will reveal the fact.

Where Ayer's Cherry Pectoral is allowed a fair trial, relief is the sure result. Even the most stubborn and persistent cough soon yields to this famous and non-expectant.

"I have been recently troubled with a dry cough which seemed to be caused by an irritation in the throat. My physician prescribed for it, but no relief was obtained. My attention being called to Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, I resolved to try it, and in one day after beginning its use I could see a change for the better. By the time I had used it a week, my cough disappeared."—H. W. Denny, 32 Franklin square, Worcester, Mass.

"Over a year ago I contracted a severe cold. A cough rapidly developed, which became so serious that my friends advised a change of climate. A relative suggested me to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. This medicine gave me immediate relief, and finally cured me."—Alex. S. Sadove, Springfield, Mass.

Rev. Franklin Keyes's Will.

The last will and three codicils thereto of the late Franklin Keyes have been presented for probate. The testator gives to his nephew, John S. Wheeler of Woburn, a legacy of $2,000 in money, his shop tools and fixtures, and desires to have the parcels of land known as the shop lot, the stable lot, and the Frog Hole lot. To his faithful housekeeper, Mrs. Sarah E. Cotton, is given his household furniture, also 40 shares of the capital stock of the First National Bank in Woburn, Mass., and his pew in the First Congregational meeting-house.

To the City of Woburn is given the sum of $500 to be held in trust, the income to be expended under the direction of the city commissioners in keeping in repair perpetually his lot in the Woburn cemetery and the granite and marble thereon, and keeping said lot in good order and condition, the grass to be mowed as often as is necessary, and a cordill given to the lot to the City of Woburn "upon the perpetual trust to care for the same as provided in my will, but without power to alienate said lot or to permit any person to be interred therein after I shall have been laid there."

All the residue of the estate, real and personal, is given "to the Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church, incorporated by the Legislature of the State of New York to be used and expended in the interest of and for the furtherance and advancement of foreign missions only."

John S. Wheeler of Woburn, the testator's nephew, is named as sole executor and is exempt from giving receipts. The will is dated March 3d 1887, and the last codicil is dated Nov. 12, 1889.

The life of Gov. Goodell of N. H., was saved by the use of Mevin's Rheumatic Remedy.

East Middlesex Horse Car Fares.

There is much feeling among the patrons of the East Middlesex horse railroad in relation to the exorbitant fares. At present the fares are scheduled as follows: Woburn to Stoneham, 3 miles, eight cents; Woburn to Melrose Highlands, 6 miles, thirteen cents; Woburn to Malden, 8 miles, eighteen cents; Stoneham to Melrose Highlands, 3 miles, five cents.

It seems to me, after carefully considering the matter, that the present rates are enormously high and show a genuine New England, conservative, grasping basis of management. Here are Woburn's and Stoneham's citizens paying 75 per cent more for transportation over the same distance than their Melrose brethren pay and, as the travel between these two points is largely of a commercial nature, the poor man and woman, workers in the vineyard, are taxed to support the road and at a higher rate than is charged by any other horse railroad in this country. The managers will naturally say they know how much it costs to run their road, and that the present rates are scarce enough to keep the line open the round year. Have they ever tried the popular fare scheme? Have they ever tried to enter to the masses and thus attempt to build up business? Do they ever think that prospectors for homes take the matter of horse car fares into consideration and refresh their bodies and minds but the present rates indicate that they figure on the wrong basis.

It would not be a bad idea if the managers were to consider a new rate and make a trial of it for at least six months. See them about a schedule as follows: 100 cents between Woburn and Melrose, $10.00 and all way fares between Woburn, Stoneham, Melrose and Malden, 5 cents. This is a reasonable rate as compared with the present rates and even these seem exorbitant in contrast with other lines. One can ride from Oak Sq. to City Point for 5 cents, or from any Northern or Eastern station to the Reservoir for the same amount, the distance being on an average of about 4 miles.

Then to come the idea that if a low rate of fares were established the social public would become long distance patrons, where now only ride between points. Hundreds of families, too poor to hire a horse and carriage, would soon get into the habit on summer evenings of taking an outing and refresh their bodies and minds with the beauty of nature, the fresh air of the uplands, for no suburban road is more noted for picturesque scenery than is the road between Woburn and Malden.

That there will be a united effort on the part of the road's patrons to induce the Company to lower their fares is certain, and for the benefit of that public, as well as the Corporation which will be legislated into compliance with the demands if they do not accede to the wants of their patrons, these lines are written most dispassionately.

Major Johnson For Congress.

A young man who has already made his mark in city politics is somewhat likely to be brought into the fifth district convention as a candidate for Congress. This is Mayor E. F. Johnson. He is a young man but has an old head. He has great tact and judgment. He is a descendant of one of the oldest families in the valley, and he has always had ex-Congressmen man his yard and support. When the Woburn men asked Hayden to come back from Congress and run for Mayor so that they might have the city administered as they would wish, he said, "No; you could not get a better man than Johnson."

So it proved, and although Woburn's Democratic majority is 400 to 500, Johnson has been elected and re-elected. He is a clever lawyer and conversant with the needs of the district.—Woburn Cor. Boston Record.

The Republicans of the Fifth Congressional District must be aware that it is a duty they owe to the Republican party to elect a Republican from that district. With their prominent having nothing to do, but we feel certain that the course to be pursued to bring about this result is to send unpledged delegates, men of position and high character, to the district. With a body of men thus selected there is no danger of a mistake being made which will be detrimental to the cause. Whether General Banks shall be renominated, or some one else, should receive careful consideration. Delegates left entirely free to act should be chosen.—Boston Journal.

Rapid Transit in Cities.

The growth of rapid transit facilities from 1880 to 1889, inclusive, in cities having over 50,000 inhabitants, has been great. In this period, the increase of street railway mileage, in the length of lines operated, has been from 1690 miles to 3151 miles, or an increase of 86 1-2 per cent. The greatest increase has been in the cities of Chicago and Boston. At the present time, the city of Philadelphia has the greatest mileage, followed in their order by the cities of Boston, Chicago, New York, and Brooklyn. It will be seen that in length of line New York ranks fourth, but in considering the length of all tracks including sidings, this city stands first, with 324 miles. The increase in mileage was much the greater in the last three years of the decade than in the seven previous years. Nearly 60 per cent of the increase was in these years. Considering the mileage in connection with the kinds of power employed, and it is noticed that 75 per cent of the total mileage is operated by horse power; 8 per cent by electricity; 8 per cent by cable; and 9 per cent by steam. Boston leads all other cities in the use of electricity as a motive power; Scranton, Pa., Omaha, Neb., and Pittsburgh, Pa., coming next. It is noticed as a peculiarity of Boston and Philadelphia roads, especially of the latter city, that the tracks usually occupy different streets in going to and from a terminus instead of being laid upon the same street.—Boston Journal of Commerce.

Waters of Ipswich and Rev. J. Augustine of Winchester. A reception was held, followed by a dinner. Mr. and Mrs. Hale left at once after the reception, for a short bridal tour, and their return to Winchester will be at the 17th Central street. Fully 200 invitations were issued, and a large party were present at the wedding ceremony. Mr. Hale is a member of the firm of C. N. Putnam & Co., 17 Congress street, Boston. May their life be long, prosperous and a merry one.

A terrible accident occurred to Joseph DeLong of Winchester last Saturday, which will no doubt cause his death. DeLong is employed by Beggs & Cobb in the yard of the tannery at North Winchester. He attempted to turn a valve with a wrench while standing on a beam where the shafting runs, and lost his balance and fell on to the shafting and running pulleys. The pulleys caught him and broke several of his left ribs and his collar bone, and also bruised his head. DeLong then fell into a vat of boiling hot liquor in which he called the "junk." He was completely submerged and fearfully scalded, so that the skin came off when his clothing was removed. DeLong has a wife and five or six children.

LATER. He died Saturday evening. DeLong had three ribs broken, and the bones forced into his lungs, his collar bone broken, his head badly injured, all from falling on to running pulleys and shafting, besides being horribly scalded by falling into a vat of hot tanning liquor. He was conscious for several hours after the accident.

A Humorous View of Advertising.

In this age the business man who does not advertise is doomed. Every style of advertising pays, but the greatest results are acquired from utilizing the advertising columns of a properly conducted journal. We never know of but one case in which advertising did not pay. It occurred in Chicago. A burglar overlooked eighty dollars in a bureau drawer, and the papers so announced. He returned the next night, and not only secured it, but a suit of clothes besides.

The man who doesn't hang out his shingle and advertise dies and leaves no sign. The right kind of eyes for business men is advertised. Puffs in newspapers help many merchants to "raise the wind."

Death and discontinuance of an advertisement is regarded as positive evidence of going out of business.—S., in Texas Siftings.

The largest engine in Rhode Island is now being set up at the station of Narragansett Electric Light and Power Company. It is known as the Reynolds Fly Wheel engine, and is a triple expansion condensing machine of 1500 horse power. The fly wheel alone weighs 900 pounds, and the whole engine weighs nearly 150 tons.

"tariff reform" candidate in the First Congressional District of Louisiana, will be opposed by a pronounced anti-lottery man, United States Marshal Donnelly. The district has a large Democratic majority, and the lottery and "tariff reform" nominee will probably win, in spite of the efforts of the intelligent and conscientious people of the district to prevent it.

For day a large Italian steel sailing ship, said to be one of the finest vessels ever built, had ever visited that port. The ship was built in an Italian shipyard and cost 10 per cent. below the price it would have cost in England. Evidently Italian subsidies are beginning to be felt in a way that the Clyde and the Tyne will hardly appreciate.

Ashley Hall.

A fireless heating school has been opened in the spacious and substantial old mansion house of Hon. Benjamin F. Whittemore at Montvale (one mile east of Woburn, Mass., Centre) in Misses Whittemore's house, daughter of the above named gentleman, and Miss Adeline M. Tirrell, who are ladies of not only rare literary attainments but possess executive and business ability to a degree which warrants the belief that Ashley Hall School (which is the name given it by the young ladies) will be a very appropriate one it seems to be too) will prove an immediate and splendid financial and educational success.

A better place for such an institution could not have been found in the suburbs of Boston. The mansion stands in the midst of an extensive lawn, embowered in densely foliaged trees, close by a pretty artificial sheet of water, and contains some 20 spacious rooms admirably adapted to the ends to which Misses Whittemore and Tirrell have applied them. The grounds are extensive and will admit of the erection of other buildings—gymnasium, halls for indoor sports, etc.—and are close to the Montvale station on the Boston & Lowell Division of the Boston & Maine Railroad, only 10 miles from the State House in Boston, with the street cars of the East Middlesex Street Railway Co. which runs from Woburn Centre to Stoneham, Melrose Highlands, Melrose, Malden, Chelsea, Chelsea Beach, Lynn, Boston, etc., skirting them on the east and making frequent trips, with the latest of cars, each way over the line. The location is admirable for the accommodation of a large and prosperous school, and the estate and its surroundings are as beautiful and attractive as any rural institution of learning can possibly be, and will no doubt exert strong influence in filling it with pupils from all over the State.

The school is intended to be a high class boarding and day school for young ladies, for which the proprietors, Miss Whittemore and Miss Tirrell, will employ only the most competent teachers, and to which a thorough education will be given. The curriculum will embrace all the studies taught in the best of colleges, the following being a partial list of the chief: Mathematics, Latin, Greek, History, Literature, Science, French, German, Music, vocal and instrumental, Elocution, Drawing and Painting.

Ashley Hall is destined to become a great credit to the city of Woburn, for which reason and others equally potent, the proprietors should have the hearty support and encouragement of our people.

Fitzgibbon Family.

The celebrated Fitzgibbon Family, who had such a success at Mr. Keith Bijon Theatre in Boston, Philadelphia and Providence, will be at Lyceum Hall, Saturday night, Sept. 20, prices as usual.

Farewell Social.

A social was held in the Congregational church on last Saturday evening for the purpose of giving expression to the regret felt at the announcement of the departure of Mr. and Mrs. William Senter from among us. Mr. Senter has served on the Board of Trustees and as Treasurer of the church, as one of the teachers and Treasurer of Sunday school, and as a faithful member of the society of Christian Endeavor, and as a testimonial of appreciation the three departments united in purchasing for him a life membership in the Congregational Sunday School and Publishing Society. After brief literary exercises, refreshments were served in the vestry and a pleasant evening was enjoyed by the goodly number present—Benita (Cal.), New Era. Mr. Senter and family left Woburn for California a little over three years ago and are now visiting here with a view of remaining permanently, although it is not yet decided on. Financially it would be for Mr. Senter's disadvantage to quit Benita, (where he has been employed at a good salary for three years past) and come to this city again. Saturday evening and friends are anxious to have him do so, and it would not be strange if he should yield to their wishes. Mrs. Senter, who is a sister of Mrs. John C. Plummer of Sharon, N.H., is a very desirous of getting back among her relatives. Her relatives are equally anxious that she should come with her family, and the likelihood is that the Senter family will return to their old home here and settle down, although they like California and have many warm friends there.

To Nervous Debilitated Men.

If you will send your address, we will mail you our illustrated pamphlet explaining all about Dr. Dyke's Celebrated Electro-Voltaic Belt and Appliances, and their charming effects upon the nervous debilitated system, and how they will quickly restore you to vigor and manhood. If you are thus afflicted, we will send you a Belt and Appliances on a trial. Pamphlet free. VOLTAIC BELT CO., Marshall, Mich.

We can suggest however, that a pair or two of Chenille Portieres add vastly to the looks of a room.

Yes, but we can't afford them just now, perhaps you say.

Yosemite Valley.

Last October while in San Francisco I made the acquaintance of a party of Philadelphia gentlemen who were preparing for a trip to Yosemite Valley and Mariposa Grove, and gladly accepted their invitation to accompany them. Yosemite Valley is 140 miles from San Francisco, nearly due east, in the midst of the lofty Sierras. The name has little appropriateness except as the Valley has the most beautiful and accessible spot for which it stands, for Yosemite is the Indian word for "Grizzly Bear."

We left San Francisco on the morning of Oct. 15, and journeyed by train to Stockton 100 miles distant where the balance of the day and the next were occupied in securing a guide and procuring horses and the necessary camp equipage for the rest of the journey made on horseback and afoot. We made an early start next morning with the intention of reaching the Valley in two days, but being all inexperienced horsemen, after a few hours ride we unanimously agreed that 25 miles per day was too much for our horses and governed ourselves accordingly. Our guide, Bill Hopkins by name, an old "forty-niner," was a valuable addition to our party, being thoroughly familiar with every foot of the country in this portion of the State. He proved an interesting companion on the march, but his best hold was at the frying pan, and he would dish up partridge and quail (minus pale ale and Welsh rabbit) with the intention of roasting the Valley in the shade. After supper he would light his pipe and entertain us for an hour or two from his inexhaustible supply of yarns and adventures, and which have washed down or torn from the cliffs of the Yosemite. On the afternoon of the 3rd day our guide informed us that we were nearing our destination and we soon found ourselves standing upon Inspiration Point looking down into the deep abyss and out upon this stupendous Valley of Valleys. From the edge of this precipice to the sea is 3000 feet, and that distance down the elevation is still 4000 feet above the sea level. The main Valley is seven miles long a mile and a half wide at its widest point, and it contains an area of about 8,000 acres. Two-thirds of this space is beautiful meadow, the remainder is strewn with sand, stones and gravel which have washed down or torn from the enclosing cliffs. Like a river of silver, the river Merced—by the Spaniards called "El Rio de San Juaen"—flows here and there among the overhanging cliffs, a distant view is also gained of the beautiful waterfalls with which the Valley abounds.

Descending the cliffs to the Valley it seems beyond the power of human speech to describe the majesty of these mighty walls standing at the foot of the Yosemite Falls. We could hardly believe our eyes; it seems incredible that nature should be precipitated from such a height, by official measurement it is more than half a mile, or 2641 feet, from the top to the bottom of this fall. The stream first glides over the edge of a granite cliff and plunges down in descent 1587 feet. There it beats with deafening din upon a huge shelf of rock whence it falls again in a series of grand cascades 700 feet more. Then comes a further fall of 428 feet, and after this the stream flows off through the meadows beneath the trees, as quietly and gently as if it had not been hurled from such a height or broken by such a fall.

Opposite Yosemite Fall a huge ridge of rock extends a third of a mile into the valley and stands like a buttress against the wall at its back. From this rises a granite obelisk 300 feet high, and at its base are 1200 feet high. This is called "Sentinel Rock," from its resemblance to a Watch Tower, for which purpose the Indians are said to have once used it. The entire height of the ridge from the river that flows beneath it is 3024 feet.

Lake, called by the Indians "Sleeping Water," covers about a acre and is nowhere more than 20 feet deep. From the water's edge a mile of massive cliff seems to extend into the lake below, and so perfect in the deception, that it is by no means easy to make sure which is the solid original and which the unsubstantial shadow.

After three days of unbounded enjoyment in this beautiful Valley we "broke camp," and turned our horses heads towards Mariposa Grove of which I will tell you later.

The New Scandinavian Church.

Mr. A. J. Simonson of Montvale Park, Woburn, has got the contract for building the Scandinavian Evangelical Free church of this city, his bid being the lowest of the four that had figured on the job, or $6,400 for the entire work over the cellar, except the seats. Mr. Simonson is a Scandinavian and has been in this city but two years but during this short time has gained the confidence and respect of all who have had any dealings with him. He has built several buildings in and around Woburn, and all give him credit for good honest work. No inspector is needed where Mr. Simonson has a job to perform. We are glad that the Scandinavian church Building Committee succeeded in getting Mr. Simonson to build their house of worship, for we know that this means that they will have a building that will be second to none, as far as the workmanship is concerned.

The work on the building will commence as soon as the lumber has arrived, which has been ordered from the Woburn lumber dealer Mr. E. G. Barker. How soon the completion of the church will be reached cannot yet be stated, as it depends upon the arrival of the lumber, but the people of Woburn and surroundings subscribe towards the Building Fund which is hoped, and is already been shown, we like to see it carried through at an early date. This is and will be the best inducement that can be held out for the Scandinavian people to come and make their homes here—helping them to get a church of their own which is a necessity on account of the language. May our good people heartily respond to this worthy cause. Chas. R. Rosenquist, 7 Greenwood Ave., this city is one of the committee and will be glad to hear from all who are willing to reach a helping hand in favor of contributions.

Mr. Hanson has relations and friends at home who want him to come, and who think he can do fully as well at his trade.

Mr. Anton Hanson, 10 Allen street, wife and children, will start for Christiana, Norway, tomorrow (Saturday) on the steamship Cephalonia of the Canard Line. Several Scandinavians have bought land at Montvale Park this city; a few have erected dwelling houses thereon and a few more intend to do so before long. It is said to be a Scandinavian village at Montvale Park.

Rev. C. W. Holm of Philadelphia, Pa. (the first Swedish Minister of the Gospel that visited Woburn, about 8 years ago) visited his old friends in this place Wednesday last when he also in the evening preached a good sermon in the Y. M. C. A. Hall to a large congregation. The sermon was in the Swedish language.

Several of the Scandinavians, mostly young people who have during the summer visited their old homes and relatives on the other side the great water, have come back together with others who have not been here before. They are pleased to be here once more and will, probably stay for good. We give them welcome, and would say there is plenty of room for more.

Rev. O. Z. Tinglof, Missionary among the Scandinavians in Mass., had charge of the meetings in the Scandinavian church last Sunday. He gave two very good sermons, and in the evening there was a large congregation was assembled. The Scandinavian meetings are held regularly every Sunday night at 10:20 and at 7:30 P. M., and on Wednesday evenings at 7:30 o'clock in the Y. M. C. A. Hall. All are invited. Services are held in the Scandinavian language.

A country editor said of his rival: "Aside from his beery flights and fancies his paper is pretty good, as it advocates the use of the economical Brussels soap."

"My feet are so slim I never can get a good fit unless I pay quite a high price." Then try Stearns' at his well-known store, corner of Hanover and Blackstone streets, and see what he can do for you in the way of a Ladies' fine boot. Goat or Kid for just $2.

"Chipman's Liver Pills

the best in the world. Never gripe or make you sick. They are purely vegetable, and will cure your bilious troubles. All who use them speak well of them. Sold by all druggists."

All Others Fall Short.

None can imitate Shakespeare or Milton with success; Edison has no duplicate on earth; American push and individuality have no peer. In other words there are things in this world that can not be successfully counterfeited. And among them must be counted Brussels soap. Though destined to work about the dirt of earth, yet there it fulfills its mission to perfection and with ease. It is economical.

Last Friday morning between 12 and 1 o'clock burglars visited that part of this town known as Cutter's Village. They effected an entrance into the house of Mr. William Cameron, on Salem street, through a window in the kitchen which had been left open, and secured about $20 from a pocket-book of Mr. Cameron's, which was in his trousers pocket in the room where he was sleeping. From the dining room they took a dozen of solid silver spoons, but did not take some plated ones that were with the others. They were then evidently frightened away by Mr. James Cameron, the son, who, being awakened about that time by the restlessness of his child, arose and lighted a lamp. He then heard a noise but supposed it was occasioned by his father who occupies a room down stairs. A wallet containing $10, which lay on the mantelpiece in the kitchen, was found untouched. Mr. James Cameron always has a loaded revolver handy and he would have made it hot for them if he had known any burglars were in the house. The house of Mr. John McConough on the same street was also visited, where they stole a gold watch, a diamond ring and a small sum of money. They also made unsuccessful attempts at Mr. Hall's on Salem street. Mr. Henry Wood's on Water street, and Mr. Patrick Dowd's on Canal street, in the latter place they got into the cellar but were frightened away by the barking of Mr. Dowd's small dog. The police were notified but as yet have found no clue as to who the burglars were.

"I'm the man of this house," said

"My fifteen-year-old man," said his

And Katie dimpled and then relaxed into swift gravity.

"I know what I can do, Phil," she

"Something of the guardian angel style," laughed Phil, trying to joke away the moisture he felt creeping into his eyes. "You're a tramp, Katie; but of course that's all nonsense—the

Katie wasn't sure of that, however, and she meant to do just as she said if it were. She would feel as if she were somehow helping Phil, and that would be a comfort.

Their little dwelling, though on the same side of the river as the mill, was above it and around a wide bend; and so the long, low structure under the river bank was in plain view from the kept her word faithfully; and once or twice every night she would creep out of her warm nest to the window and look down across the bend to the mill.

Often, not always, she could see Phil's light shining out of the engine-room, and sometimes she watched it go from window to window as Phil went his hourly rounds over the mill.

As for Phil I am sure that, though he would hardly have acknowledged it, the lonely place where his nights were passed seemed far less lonely to him when he remembered that Katie might be sitting there looking from her window and thinking of him.

So a month passed by, and Phil performed his duties to Mr. Medway's entire satisfaction. There were some,

The Woburn Journal

FRIDAY, SEPT. 26, 1890.

THE JOURNAL is for sale at the stores of Sparrow Street, 195 Main Street, Charles R. Brown, 156 Main Street, John Cummings, 40, Cummingsville, Samuel E. Wilson, W. A. A. North Woburn, and at G. F. Brown's Winchester.

SPECIAL NOTICE.
All advertisements to insure insertion in this paper, must be handed in as early as possible on Thursday forenoon.

REPUBLICAN TICKET.

For Governor, J. Q. A. Brackett
For Lieutenant Governor, William H. Hale
For Secretary of State, William M. Olin
For Auditor, J. H. Gould
For Attorney-General, A. E. Pillsbury
For Treasurer, George A. Marden
For Congress, James A. Fox

FOR REPRESENTATIVE TO THE GENERAL COURT.

Mr. Samuel A. Grammer of this city is a candidate for the Massachusetts House of Representatives from the 14th Middlesex District and the chances are strongly in favor of his nomination and election. If the forthcoming District convention adheres to the compact made by Republican agents of the town when they were legislated into a Representative District, which was that each town should be entitled to a candidate each year, as will probably be the case, then Mr. Grammer's nomination is assured, and his election will follow almost as a matter of course.

The Journal need not undertake to tell the people of either Woburn or Reading who Mr. Samuel A. Grammer is, nor what sort of material he is made of. He was born and bred in Woburn and has spent his life within her borders. He is known in all the region around about here as an intelligent, honest, upright man and useful citizen, and no person enjoys the esteem and confidence of his fellow-men in larger measure than he does. Nor has he ever been an office-seeker.

Mr. Grammer is popular with all classes. He will command the entire Republican strength of the District and draw heavily from the Democratic ranks. There is probably no Republican in Woburn who would receive more, and very few have much support at the polls as he. Everyone knows just where to find him; he has never made a secret of his political principles; he is outspoken on the temperance and other moral questions; and still no man has fewer enemies than Grammer.

A majority of the delegates to the convention are already pledged to support Mr. Grammer, and if Reading Republicans put up a candidate equally acceptable the District will be represented the next Legislature by two Republicans instead of two Democrats.

WILL NOT BE A CANDIDATE.

Representative Charlie A. Jones, Esq., of this city has been importuned by leading and influential Republicans and Democrats to accept another term in the Legislature but he positively declines to do so.

Mr. Jones filled the place admirably at the last session. He is a good business man and carried practical ideas into his official conduct. Thus his course was eminently satisfactory to men of both parties who like to see business methods prevail in the law-making branch of our State government. This is the reason why they have been to Mr. Jones and repeatedly urged him to take a re-election.

But he declines peremptorily to allow his name to be used in the nominating convention. This is to be regretted for he is the right man for the place. The demands of his private business is the reason given by Mr. Jones for refusing to yield to the solicitations of leading citizens and be a candidate again this year.

CONGRESSIONAL CONVENTION.

The Republican Congressional Convention for the 5th District was held at Wesleyan Hall in Boston last Tuesday and resulted, on the 15th ballot, in the nomination of James A. Fox, Esq., of Cambridge. If the opposition had massed their forces against him he could not have prevailed and some other gentleman would have carried off the prize.

Mayor Johnson was handsomely supported by his friends and, for a beginner, made a strong showing in the convention. He was perfectly satisfied with the support he received.

Now, gentlemen, shall the Cambridge ex-Mayor be triumphantly elected in November?

The Republican District Committee for the 14th Middlesex Representative District are: William E. Blodgett, George C. Conn and Charles F. Spear, all of Woburn; and F. W. B. Pratt and Gilman F. Parker, both of Reading. The convention has not yet been called.

As Woburn did so much better by candidate Bancroft last year than Reading did (Bancroft is a citizen of Reading) it would be no more than fair for Reading to let Woburn have both candidates this year.

Yesterday was a delightful day. Read what Mr. C. Willard Smith says about carpets. Read what J. O. says about a house he wants to rent. Prior is going to have as fine a store as the best of people anywhere have.

— Mr. Cyrus Lamb is revamping the stores in Church Block in good shape.
— Bonelli has a new card in this paper, with particular attention is called.

— Fred Leeds is closing out a big stock of pocketbooks at greatly reduced prices.

— Officer McDermott has returned to his post after a pleasant vacation.

— There was quite a heavy frost last Wednesday night—the first of the season.

— Read the change in the business card of Mr. C. E. Smith. He sells goods very cheap.

— The lawn party at Major Pat Tenney's last Saturday evening was a brilliant social event.

— The Five Cent Savings Bank publishes a communication of importance in this paper this week.

— Mr. E. C. Colman is putting some autumn tins and lead-and-lead touches on his fine farmhouse at Woodside.

— Mr. and Mrs. D. W. Johnson of Salem street, have been visiting their son, Dr. Johnson, of Berlin, N. H.

— The Reading delegates to the Republican Representative convention are solid for Mr. Samuel A. Grammer.

— Fitz & Stanley's bookkeeper, Miss Clara Leslie, and her sister Ella have gone to Hartford, Conn., for a visit.

— Mrs. D. F. McIntosh went to Providence, R. I., a few days since on a visit and will remain there two or three weeks.

— Mr. J. H. Nason has gone into the life insurance business and is said to be making good progress in it. He is a smart talker.

— Supt. Crilly has got work on the new pipe to the reservoir pretty well begun. It will be pushed to completion before winter sets in.

— The Woburn Gas Light Company recently declared a semi-annual dividend of 4 per cent. Pretty good—8 per cent per annum is.

— Miss Josephine Hinckley, teacher in the Grammar school, has resigned to enter the matrimonial state. —Winchester Star. E-h? So-so?

— We hear that Mr. Griffin Place refuses the use of his name for candidate for Representative in town. Which settles all talk in that question.

— Frazer who is charged with assaulting Terrance McGrath last Saturday evening was in Court Wednesday morning and bound over to $1000.

— The Colechester Rubber Co. have an interesting card in the JOURNAL this week. The goods of this company are staple and popular the world over.

— Col. W. T. Grammer was quite sick the fore part of this week and was threatened with malaria fever. But he stood off and is about the streets again.

— Representative C. A. Jones of this city will please accept the JOURNAL's thanks for a copy of the "Acts and Resolves of Massachusetts—1890."

— Mr. Waterman Brown's growth of flowers was better this year than ever before, but his vegetables didn't pan out worth a cent—more especially fava beans.

— Mrs. Thomas H. Hill sent us up a big and beautiful bouquet of cut autumn flowers, ferns and foliage plants yesterday morning, for which we return thanks.

— Sunday was a delicious day and several others equally delicious followed. The autumn weather so far, rain excepted, has been all that the heart could ask for.

— Mr. Phil K. Richardson has been appointed to fill a vacancy on the Board of Registrars of Voters caused by the resignation of George C. Conn, and he will make a good one.

A gentleman up at No. Woburn wants the JOURNAL to ask if it is possible to pickpeppers so that they will retain their sharp, pungent qualities. Don't talk at once.

— The Fitzgibbons family sang to not more than two dozen people at Lyceum Hall last Saturday. It was too bad, for the troupe is a fine musical combination and deserved a full house.

— But precious little fruit of any kind has been raised around in these parts this season. The quantity is almost nil and the quality of what little there is is nothing to brag on.

— Miss Pollard's contribution to the columns of the JOURNAL this week makes good reading and will be found valuable as a guide to patrons of our Public Library who seek the best books.

— The official report of the Census Bureau shows the population of Woburn to be 13,491 instead of 13,440, which was Chief Wallin's estimated figure. Might as well call it 13,500, and done with it.

— Last Tuesday we were favored with a pleasant call from Mr. Parker Wheeler of Bellingham formerly of Somerset County, Maine, who was making a business trip through these parts. As an old townsman we were glad to see him.

— Mr. Elmore A. Pierce of Woburn, associated press reporter for the city, has been nominated as Representative to the Legislature. He is a remarkably brilliant man and would most creditably represent the District. —Winchester Star.

— Mrs. E. C. Colman, the mistress of Woodside, is visiting her old home and many friends at East Wilton, Franklin County, Maine. She will be away several weeks, during which period the master of the place will drag out a miserable existence keeping "bachelor's hall."

— Mr. J. B. McDonald and his son Mr. Fred McDonald left here last Tuesday evening for Groveton, N. H., where the Weston Lumber Company, of which the senior McDonald is President, are building a saw-mill of double the capacity of any now owned and run by them which is demanded by the increase of their lumber manufacturing business there.

The Company have had built for the new mill a 300 H. P. engine and a 350 H. P. boiler and all the machinery will be of the very best.

— Mr. Sparrow Horton's new store at 412 Main street, College (Wade) Block is going to be a nice, neat and snug one. The location is better than the old one, easier of ingress, handy to everything, and right where it can't help but catch the transient people who want to buy. The change is a good one.

— The American Library Association were royally entertained in Boston last week by a few leading Boston publishing houses. They were given a banquet, a sail down the Harbor, and had other attentions paid to them. Mr. W. R. Cutter, Librarian of the Woburn Public Library, was one of the guests.

— The JOURNAL Book and Job office is complete in all its appointments and has the reputation of turning out as fine work and as much of it as any printing establishment in Middlesex county. It is fully supplied with presses, all the latest styles of type, stock and men to use them, and gentlemen, your work is respectfully solicited.

— It is reported that Representative Stanesby will not under any circumstances be a candidate for re-election to the House this fall. We had supposed it would be otherwise, but there are good grounds for saying that if he is nominated he will certainly refuse to accept. The truth is, Mr. Moreland don't want the place and will have no more of it for the present at least.

— A wonderful bargain in a Bookcase is offered by Paine's Furniture Co., 48 Court street, at the corner of the city. It is only $10, and the Bookcase has five wide shelves, carrying 175 to 200 volumes, with brass rod and brass polished rings for curtain front. Above the Bookcase is a charming cabinet with side openings, and a broad top with a gallery on three sides. It is really a $20 Bookcase for $10.

— The report of the failure of Mr. C. E. Smith, the painter, wallpaper merchant, etc., which was current last week, was totally without foundation.

A gentleman connected with the failure of the painter by the name of Smith in some other town. Our Mr. Smith is doing a bigger and more prosperous business than ever before. He employs a large number of workmen and pays them promptly, as he does all other debts. No such failure there.

— Who should drop in on the Editor's family last Tuesday but Solon Kendall, Esq., for many years an Illinois neighbor and friend. He has been in the East since early in August and has been stopping some time. Up to a year ago Mr. Kendall had been a Trustee of the Illinois Reform School at Pontiac continuously for over 20 years and is a gentleman who has hosts of friends in the West. We were glad to see him.

— Mr. E. C. Cottle is putting new machinery and power into the Blake tannery recently bought by him and intends to do a large amount of manufacturing there. He will carry on a bigger business than ever and increase his place accordingly. It is reported that Mr. John K. Murdoch contemplates putting in a tannery plant to supplement his currying business, which two items taken together give the impression that there is "money in leather" about these days. It means too a better general trade in this city than we have had for some time past.

— Relief Corps 83 have organized a Sewing Society for the benefit of the poor. It is a sort of revival of the old fashioned Sewing Society (sometimes called Dorcas Society, sometimes the Good Samaritan, etc.) and is generally regarded one of the best things there is to promote social intercourse and the welfare of the needy or the collection of funds, in the community. The old Sewing circle used to be made of scraps of paper and the days of telegraphs and daily papers for their propensity to circulate news; but all that is passed away, and the Sewing Society of this later day is not by any means amenable to such charge.

— The alterations, changes, improvements and furnishings of Mr. C. M. Munroe's store are completed and a finer one can't be found in Middlesex county. New electric light and gas fixtures of the brightest brass have been put in the store windows and the old fashioned Sewing Circle (sometimes called Dorcas Society, sometimes the Good Samaritan, etc.) and is generally regarded one of the best things there is to promote social intercourse and the welfare of the needy or the collection of funds, in the community. — The new officers of the W. H. S. Battalion are: Major, Irving R. Bancroft; Adjutant, Elliot F. Trull; Quartermaster, George Barker. The officers of Company A are: Captain, Edwin K. Porter; First Lieutenant, Frank S. Ellard; Second Lieutenant, Patrick D. Carney. The officers of Company B are: Captain, J. Chester Hanson; First Lieutenant, Frederic Hanson; Second Lieutenant, Walter L. Dodge. About 90 men compose the Battalion, a dozen or so of whom are members of the Grammar schools, the balance being High School pupils. Samuel W. Mendum, Assistant Principal of the High School, was elected Drillmaster at the election of teachers in July last and is doing good work it is said.

He obtained his military training in the Boston Latin School, and is well versed in the science of military tactics. The W. H. S. B. is the 6th in the Second Mass. School Regiment. It is composed of a sturdy set of lads this year.

— After two years of hard and persistent effort Postmaster Reads has succeeded in securing an early morning mail for this city from Boston. Hereafter the first mail received from Boston Dis. office has been towards 8 o'clock in the morning, but heretofore it was not until 10 o'clock.

The train which leaves Boston at 6 a. m. and arrives in this city at 6:30 a. m. will bring all mail matter lying in the metropolitan office at that hour destined for Woburn which will give our people their mail an hour earlier than heretofore, for the letter carrier will start that much sooner from the office and the delivery will be made ready for business at an hour correspondingly early. This is a valuable concession on the part of the Postoffice department, for securing which the credit belongs to Postmaster Reads.

Another good thing which he has accomplished is an order for the mails from the north to be left here instead of being carried to Boston and thence sent back to Woburn. Why such an idiotic practice was continued after the trains from the north were sent via the Woburn Loop is beyond the comprehension of the average citizen; but Mr. Reads has secured a reform and hereafter our mails from the north will be thrown off here instead of going to Boston and then being sent back to this city. These changes are improvements and will be fully appreciated by the public.

State Convention Oct. 23 to 26, at Haverhill.

Saturday evening prayer meeting at 8 o'clock. All men invited.

4 p.m. Sunday Men's meeting. The singing will be an attractive part.

Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock boys meeting addressed by one of the business men of this city. Singing led by Mr. Colby.

The Women's Conference of the Women's Auxiliary of this State and Rhode Island will be held at Cambridge Thursday Oct. 2, 1890.

Tuesday afternoon the Woman's Auxiliary have their first meeting of the fall. Hour of the meeting 3 p.m., but let all be there at 2.45 so as to have few women beginning.

Many warm friends of our Association are not quite satisfied that it is best to debar the women from our gospel meetings, and possibly we who have settled the question in our own minds long ago, do not have patience always to explain why the meetings are limited to "men only."

As the question will be raised frequently while our special meetings are going on, a few reasons are given below:

1. The avowed work of the Association is for young men.

2. This work is for them specially because they most need it.

3. Experience proves that best results are obtained in this way.

4. The churches hold and care for the girls and young women, and young men cannot do for them what the church now does for them successfully.

5. Speculation is the business of today and we hold that we are in this direct line of work thus our mass meetings.

Purchasers of kitchen supplies will do well to direct their attention to the interesting announcement which those well known business people, Messrs. Hollander, Bradshaw & Folsom, make in another column. With no attempt whatever to confuse or bewilder the searcher for truth they simply place before him in a modest, honest, businesslike manner the fact that they are selling the various kinds of kitchen furnishings above and below the ordinary prices, and they prove this by publishing the prices at which those goods can be bought of them.

About Law Schools.

WOBURN, Sept. 24, '90.

Mr. Geo. A. Horns: In the last issue of your paper I noticed a paragraph referring to Mr. E. H. Lounsbury's entrance to the Harvard Law School, in which you complimented the gentleman for choosing "the best," meaning that the Harvard institution was superior to any other law school in the country.

That little paragraph occasioned considerable comment, and the legal fraternity of this city and also among people who have watched the career of our law schools, remain, and the legal fraternity of this city and also among people who have watched the career of our law schools, remain, and the legal fraternity of this city and also among people who have watched the career of our law schools, remain.

The almost unanimous opinion was that the Harvard School was not at all on a par with the Law School of Boston University. The Harvard School has such a reputation that the latter's legal talent with the former gentlemen. When too, we consider that not three fourths of the Harvard graduates intending to practice law choose to study at the H. U. L. S. it would seem poor judgment to class the latter inferior to the Cambridge School.

Noting that the article was intended only as a compliment to Mr. Lounsbury's judgment and not as a slur upon other Law Schools, remain, and the legal fraternity of this city and also among people who have watched the career of our law schools, remain.

Why This Sudden Change?

If Congressmen Banks should conclude to let Woburn select Postmaster Read's successor next February by ballot, as some people hope he will, and as several Congressmen have done before him, it would not be at all surprising if Mr. Banks should be chosen to succeed himself. Stranger things than that has happened in this ever-changing world of ours. [JOURNAL.] Why this sudden change, Mr. Banks? When Winchester elected its present postmaster you were most severe in your condemnation of such method. What's up?—Winchester Star.

Don't you remember to have read, my boy, when you went to school? "Circumstances alter cases?" Do? Then why this interrogatory?

It Is So!

We will sell you "The Best All-Wool Extra Super Carpets" cheaper than you can buy them in Boston.

Woburn Public Library.

The annual vacations are at an end, the autumn session of the schools has begun and the scholars are already well started on the work of the year. In consequence of this there is quite a lively and widespread appearance at the Library and we are glad to see the interest and enthusiasm manifested by our young people in their search for subjects and answers to questions.

The public library is the place where the scholar can find the answers to his questions. It is a place where the student in science is taught how to use the instruments put into his hands; it is in fact the workshop where the material may be found in which to accomplish all he may desire.

A number of valuable and important books have been placed upon the shelves during the last few weeks, among which are "Hambles in the Black Forest" by H. Wolf where a good description is given of that part of Germany so little known to any but the Germans until recently. The English in our history ever so completely we have been claiming the new State has given rise to an impression in some quarters that Wyoming might actually be in the uncertain column. Now that it has gone Republican our Democratic friends will wish that instead of having professed such unbounded confidence that the State was a Democratic one, they had stuck to their earlier policy of stigmatizing the admission of Wyoming as a "partisan outrage." It is, of course, to the completion of the Legislature that the chief interest attaches, and it is now made clear beyond any doubt that Wyoming will add two to the already large Republican majority in the national Senate.—Boston Journal.

An Elevated Railroad Rumor.

There are rumors of an elevated railroad which will start from Stoneham, and skirting West Road, pass through the western part of Malden, Edgeworth, Somerville and Charlestown terminating Haymarket Square.—Boston Herald.

Suburban elevated railroads have got to come, and come pretty soon too. The only way they can be staved off is for the Street Railway Company to install electricity for a motor without any unnecessary delay.

Banana Fritters.

Pare, split and cut in two, six bananas; sprinkle the pieces with two tablespoons of sugar, the juice of an orange, and let them stand for an hour. Make a batter with the fruit juice, a small cup of flour, one egg, a little milk, and a teaspoonful of butter; dip and fry. The most delicious of fruits, have no attraction for the individual who has no appetite and suffers with dyspepsia. Ayer's Sarsaparilla improves the appetite and aids digestion.

It is an economical young man who escorts his sister to entertainments, instead of some other fellow's sister. Such a young man studies his pocketbook, and when he marries he will supply his family with Brussels soap, because it's economical and good.

"The beautiful little mackerel gulls, which a few years since were so plentiful in our Maine bays and estuaries, have entirely disappeared, and are now never seen," says the Lewiston Journal. This is a mistake. The birds are quite numerous in Frenchman's Bay.

It's economical—Brussels soap.

"It's getting quite dark now," remarked Cholly as they sat on the front piazza. "Yes," she answered, with a touch of scorn as she surveyed the distance between them. "One might imagine you were afraid of the dark."

It is universally admitted that a mother should, if she is able, rear her child. If she can, it is for good reason it is not advisable, then, to send a child to school, which has been proven to correspond physiologically with mother's milk, should be.

"I think these are grounds for suspicion," said the boarder who found traces of dried peas in his coffee cup.

Boston Theatres.

Katie Patnam, one of the successful soprano stars of the day, will bring a new play to the Grand Opera House on Monday. It is called "Love will find a way." The Grand Opera is giving the public some fine dramatic entertainments this fall.

Light, unsubstantial and practically plotless as it is, "Castles in the Air" is the means by which no little enjoyment is brought to the lover of amusement and melody. De Wolf Hopper, characteristically droll, has plenty to do in the opera. Piquant Della Fox is certainly as nimble, graceful and alert a singing soubrette as the lyric stage has presented. Klein is very amusing as Hopper's foil, and Seabrook's quaint and original vein of humor finds apt expression. This is the last work of this handsomely mounted lyric production at the Globe Theatre.

A great swinging drawbridge, opening and closing on the busy river that runs through Chicago, will be the scene of a most exciting situation at the Globe next week. "Money Mad" is the play. It is an American melodrama, by Steele Mackaye, and was greatly successful in New York. E. J. Henley and a special company will appear in the play under J. M. Hill's direction.

Miles' Nerve & Liver Pills.

An important discovery. They act on the liver, stomach and bowels through the nerves. A new principle. They speedily cure biliousness, bad taste, torpid liver, piles and constipation. Splendid for men, women and children. Smallest, mildest, surest. 30 doses for 25 cents. Samples free at Charles H. Buse's Drug Store.

Burlington.

A raccoon is said to frequent the corn fields in the west part of the town.

Do not forget the date of the Burlington Cattle Show, Wednesday, Oct. 1.

Mrs. Martha Sewall Curtis is to contribute a historical sketch of Burlington to the advertising newspaper to be published for the Agricultural Fair.

Mr. Charles W. Bennett has bought the shop opened formerly by the late J. J. Alley with the adjoining lot of land. Mr. Fortis has opened a blacksmith shop in one part of the building.

Mr. E. W. Locke of Chelsea, "Father Locke," gave an entertaining lecture in the Town Hall on Thursday evening of last week. The lecture consisted of reminiscences of his experience in the war and at the conclusion he gave several of his stirring songs. A large number of the company present patronized the baked bean supper in the upper hall. The entertainment was given by the committee for athletic sports at the Globe Show and they desire to thank their friends who so very generously assisted them.

It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction, or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box. For sale by H. L. Flanders & Co.

Wyoming.

There now seems to be no question that the Republican State ticket in the new Commonwealth of Wyoming has been elected by an ample majority. There has never been any real doubt that such would be the result, but the pertinacity with which some of the Democratic newspapers have been claiming the new State has given rise to an impression in some quarters that Wyoming might actually be in the uncertain column. Now that it has gone Republican our Democratic friends will wish that instead of having professed such unbounded confidence that the State was a Democratic one, they had stuck to their earlier policy of stigmatizing the admission of Wyoming as a "partisan outrage."
